Southerners Joining GOP In Defense of Hartley Law

Most of Committee Expected to Insist On Closing Senate Hearings Thursday

By David McConnell
NYHT News Service

Growing opposition to blanket abolition of the controversial Taft-Hartley labor law developed yesterday among conservative Southern Democrats who joined with Republicans in 1947 to override President Truman's veto of the measure.

Stiffening resistance to administration demands to kill the Republican-sponsored measure came as Congress prepared for a busy week which is expected to produce the following:

1. Insistence of the Democratic majority on the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare to close the bitter Taft-Hartley repeal hearings on Thursday. Senator Taft (R., Ohio) asserted yesterday that this would gag the bulk of witnesses who have asked to appear in protest against the repeal.

2. A lively debate today on a motion by Senator Knowland (R., Calif.) to force Senate consideration of an anti-filibuster resolution. The resolution is expected to start a filibuster by Southern Democrats once it is reported out of the Committee on Rules and Administration. The Democratic Senate majority caucused yesterday and agreed to oppose Knowland's proposal.

3. Presentation today by former President Herbert Hoover of the first installment of his commission's report on reorganization of the Executive branch of the Government. A bill to revive President Truman's powers to reorganize Government agencies by executive order, subject to Congressional veto, is scheduled to reach the House floor today.

Ellender Talks of Recommittal

Stormy sailing for advocates of the Truman substitute labor bill, which would return the Nation's labor statutes to provisions of the Wagner Law with a few changes, developed in both the Senate and House. What was interpreted as an important break in Democratic ranks came when Senator Ellender (D., La.) voiced objections to the majority leadership's decision to end hearings on the Taft-Hartley repealer Thursday.

Ellender said yesterday he expects to move to return the legislation to the labor committee if public hearings are cut short. He predicted that the Senate will "back me up."

Ellender's announcement recalled the dramatic Senate vote on June 23, 1947, when 20 Democrats, 19 of them southerners, lined up with 48 Republicans to override

Police Passing Beating Scene Are Identified

Both Refuse to Say If They Actually Saw The Attack on Cabbie

By Al Lewis and Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporters

The identity of two foot patrolmen, who were walking through Thomas Circle when a cab driver was brutally beaten there early January 14 was learned last night by The Washington Post.

They are Privates M. W. McClanahan and D. F. Reid, of the Second Precinct, who were walking as partners through Thomas Circle, when cab driver James Rowell, 48, was assaulted without explanation.

The identities were learned last night after extensive questioning in the Second Precinct by a Washington Post reporter.

Both men declined to say if they actually saw or recognized any participants in the beating. Up to last night, their identity had been a closely held secret at police headquarters.

Rowell, who lost three teeth and suffered bruised ribs and a broken arm, has no police record and was not wanted by police. He said Saturday he was unable to pick out his assailants from a police lineup.

Included in that lineup were Detective Sergeant James Roche and Plainclothesman Angelo Bonnacorsy, who were relieved of vice squad duty soon after the beating.

Superintendent of Police Maj. Robert J. Barrett has said that Roche and Bonnacorsy "are guilty as hell, but I've got to get the evidence to prove it."

Participants Gone

McClanahan and Reid, it was learned, were on the north side of Thomas Circle when they heard a commotion on the opposite side. Running across the circle, they found that there had been a fight but that the participants had left the scene.

Reid said last night he had not broadcast a lookout. Both men refused to elaborate.

They referred all questions to Second Precinct Capt. Clyde N. Strange.

Strange would not reveal any of the case.

He referred all questions to Inspector Robert S. Bryant, chief of detectives, who was assigned to investigate Rowell's beating. The assignment was by Inspector Floyd A. Truscott, then acting superintendent of police in the absence of Barrett, who was on sick leave in Florida.

Bryant said last night that there were no new developments in the beating case.

Rowell, who lives at 5354 Quincy st.; Cheverly, Md., told this story of his beating to The Post. At 5 a. m. on the 14th, he parked his cab near Thomas Circle to buy headache powders at a drugstore, when he saw two men "giving a small man a going over."

He stopped, watched briefly and

Meat, Wool Price Rise Held Likely

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Two Government departments cautioned yesterday against hopeful expectation of immediate lower prices and even suggested that meat and some clothing prices might go higher.

The Department of Agriculture said meat prices might "rise moderately" in the next few months if consumer demand remained unchanged. This, the department said, would be a result of a seasonal lag in production which should be felt at least until April.

Purchasers of woolen clothing were warned by the Commerce Department not to look for any permanent price cuts "in the foreseeable future." Consumer demand, heavy Russian purchases without regard for price and destruction of sheep by current Western storms, the department said, might even send wool clothing prices up.

"It's a style trend as much as anything else," said Henry Thurston, a Commerce economist. "As long as clothing buyers insist on having hard-finished worsted, this situation is going to continue."

Thurston reported "marked buyer resistance" to high-grade woolens but found no indication of a downward tendency in raw wool prices. There is a world surplus of medium and coarse wool, he said, but continued demand for the high-grade product.

As far as meat prices are concerned, the Agriculture Department reported that hog and low-grade cattle prices probably would increase in the next month, while high-grade cattle prices might hold fairly steady before declining seasonally in the spring.

The department said the Western blizzards would have little effect on meat prices in near future.

10,000 Greet Part of French Merci Train

Officials of Both Nations Express Appreciation of Idea

Ten cars of the French Merci Train rolled into the Pennsylvania Railroad siding at 14th and D sts. sw. yesterday to receive a rousing welcome from an estimated 10,000 Washingtonians.

The colorfully decorated "40 and 8" boxcars, each crammed with approximately 10,000 tokens of French gratitude for America's Friendship Train, pulled onto the siding as eight Air Force jet planes roared overhead.

French Ambassador Henri Bonnet called the Gratitude Train, initiated by the French Federation of Railroad Veterans and stuffed with contributions from 6 million Frenchmen, "the symbol of democratic freedom."

Thanks Expressed

"From the people of France to all of you, I say thank you from the bottom of my heart," the ambassador said.

He said the French people especially wanted the train to come here because the name of Washington recalls the "greatest period of a common history."

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), also on hand to welcome the train, said the train marked "a significant and eloquent moment" in the relations between France and America.

"It speaks not from government to government in the cautious terms of international diplomacy, but from countryside to countryside in the candid and enthusiastic disclosure of basic brotherhood," he said.

From Heart of France

Vice President Alben W. Barkley told the crowd, which by this time had swarmed over every available nearby freight car, that in the 49 cars "has come to us the heart of France."

After a message in French from M. Edouard Herriot, president of the French Chamber of Deputies and former French Prime Minister, had been read, Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) cut the red, white, and blue ribbon on the lock of the forty-ninth car, symbolically opening it to receive the gratitude gifts.

A token gift of six French war medals was taken from the packed interior of the car, whose contents the district will share with the

5 Wealthy Women Buy Valentino's Home as a Shrine

Hollywood, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Five wealthy women who still sigh over Rudolph Valentino today bought his fabulous hilltop home as a shrine.

The middle-aged San Francisco matrons paid $100,000 for the Falcon's Lair, where the sleek-haired sheik lived before he died in 1926.

The house was sold by another Valentino fan, Gypsy Buys of San Francisco, who said she hated to give it up. She paid $100,000 for it three years ago.

Mrs. Buys refused to give the names of the purchasers.

The new owners, who will move in Saturday, said they planned to restore the mansion as a lasting memorial to the great lover. All that's left of the original furnishings is Valentino's Venetian bed.

Purse-Snatching Charged

Policeman on Telephone Talks Theft Suspect Into Surrender

A 19-year-old shoemaker was identified as a purse snatcher in a police lineup yesterday, 12 hours after police convinced him by telephone he should surrender.

He is John H. Wages, 19, of 2014 Maryland ave. ne., who is charged with stealing a wallet belonging to Mrs. Florence Clark when both were shopping in the Food Fair, 1818 H st. ne., at 7:15 Saturday night.

Mrs. Clark, who lives at 1826 H st. ne., told police she felt her pocket being picked, turned, screamed, and the man she later identified in the lineup as Wages dropped the wallet in a potato bin, and ran from the store.

Detective Sergts. Ernest T. Jefferson and Wilbur R. Coffey investigated.

A woman in the store, who Mrs. Clark told police had been talking to Wages, turned out to be Mrs. Constance Wages, his wife. Police decided to go to the Wages' home and wait. As they drove up, Wages was walking toward the house. He spied his wife with police and started running. Coffey took off in pursuit.

The chase lasted only three blocks, when Wages disappeared in an alley. Police decided to wait at the house, until Wages returned or telephoned. In 30 minutes he telephoned. Mrs. Wages answered. Wages asked her not to tell the officers where he worked. She replied she already had.

Jefferson asked to speak to Wages, and the suspect told him he was not guilty. Jefferson suggested he give himself up and prove it.

In a short time, Wages returned home and was arrested.

Pact Terms Are Sought By Norway

Lange Flies Here For Security Talks Amid Sudden New Pressure by Soviet

By The Associated Press

Norway's Foreign Minister arrived in Washington yesterday for security talks under sudden new pressure of a virtual warning from Moscow against linking up with the West in seeking security in the cold war.

Just before Foreign Minister Halvard M. Lange took off from Oslo, Russia revealed she had offered the Norwegians a nonaggression pact. Silent, Lange came ahead, still determined to learn the terms of Norway's joining in the North Atlantic security alliance.

Russia denounced the pact once more, a clearcut demonstration of her displeasure over Norway's glances westward.

Lange said he would not comment on the note until Norway's Parliament has reviewed it.

Similar Offers Likely

Officials here cautioned it was possible Russia would follow up with similar offers to Denmark and Sweden.

Meanwhile, the ambassadors of Sweden, Norway and Denmark intend to call on Secretary of State Acheson early this week to explain their views about how best to protect Scandinavia against possible aggression.

Diplomatic officials who disclosed this said the three envoys, led by Norway's Foreign Minister, might call together on Acheson today to "lay the cards on the table."

The three diplomats, it was learned, have requested appointments for today with Acheson.

Lange arrived by plane yesterday to spend five days and present his government's views first-hand.

Decision Not Changed

He made it plain it had not changed his government's previous decision to inquire about terms of the North Atlantic Pact and decide whether to "enter preparatory talks on this matter."

He told reporters he would ask for information about "what would be the obligations and the degree of security Norway would receive if it entered the North Atlantic Pact."

[Norway's Ambassador to Washington, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, returned with Lange. Also in the party were Undersecretary Dag Byrn, Oscar Toru, parliamentary leader of the Labor Party, and Arne Gunneng, chief of section in the Norwegian foreign office.]

Russia's note was the second to Norway on the Atlantic pact. On January 29 Moscow asked her attitude and Oslo replied. The second Soviet note complained that Norway hadn't made things clear.

It said: "In order to eliminate any doubt as to the intentions of the USSR, Russia proposes to the Norwegian government the conclusion of a nonaggression pact with the USSR and thus to put an end to any doubts."

Russia was not satisfied with Norway's reply to the question about use of her territory for military bases.

The note said that Norway had declared it would not commit itself to grant military bases to others as long as Norway is not subject to threats of attack.

Moscow interpreted this statement to mean that "hastily concocted stories about a threat of attack would suffice to make Norway open her doors to foreign troops and grant bases."

People Should Be Told

Wider Publicity on Atomic Program Urged by Lilienthal

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

David E. Lilienthal, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, made an eloquent plea for more publicity for our atomic energy program in a Sunday afternoon talk before the graduating class of Lehigh University yesterday at Bethlehem, Pa.

The commission, he declared, has "found that much of what is going on in this strange new enterprise can with safety be publicly reported and publicly discussed."

His remarks sounded like a challenge to several members of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee who last week criticized recent reports of the AEC for divulging what they thought was too much information about America's progress in development of atomic weapons.

Two Democratic Senators, Millard E. Tydings (Md.) and Tom Connally (Tex.) were particularly aroused by what they thought was too much frankness by AEC.

In direct opposition Lilienthal and Committee Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) suggested that it might be strategic for the United States to tell the world how many atomic bombs are in our arsenal, and how fast we are making them.

"Because of its military aspects and the present unhappy international situation, it is not possible to make the whole atomic energy field subject to public scrutiny," Lilienthal said. But, he said, much can be disclosed that is now held secret.

"One such report was issued last Monday," he added, referring to the simi-annual report that aroused Tydings and Connally. "More reports, ranging from an Atomic Primer to an Atomic Weapon's Effects Handbook, are in preparation.

"Wide dissemination of facts and broad public discussion in this field must continue and must increase," Lilienthal declared. "For unless the people have the essential facts about atomic energy they cannot act wisely nor can they act democratically."

The commission head then asserted that wide publicity is the American way to approach the subject. He declared a basic tenet: "That this democracy of ours is founded upon a faith in the judgment of the people as a whole.

"It is founded upon a belief that when the people are informed, honestly and clearly informed, their conscience and their common sense can be relied upon to carry us safely through any crisis. The direction of applied science and

Mindszenty Doomed, His Trial a Mockery, Spellman Declares

Holds U. S. Press Blameless

Hungary Trial, News Reports 'Utter Frauds,' Says O'Boyle

Americans should not be misled by the reported confession of treason against Hungary by Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, Roman Catholic primate of Hungary, the Archbishop of Washington warned yesterday.

Speaking at St. Matthew's Cathedral, 1727 Rhode Island ave. nw., the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle asserted that Cardinal Mindszenty is not guilty of any crime nor of any moral wrong.

The only news of the trial during the past week, with one exception, came from Hungarian writers whose lives would be in jeopardy if they reported the trial truthfully, he declared. The news was slanted, he declared, but this was not due to the American press.

The archbishop reminded his hearers that before imprisonment the Hungarian cardinal wrote a letter warning that any future "confessions" must be treated as frauds or wrung from him by

Relatively Free of Controversy

Smoother Path Seen for ERP, Up for Review and Renewal

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

America's boldest adventure in postwar foreign policy, the European Recovery Program, comes up in Congress this week for review and renewal.

Today a bill extending the program for another year, and making only minor changes in the existing act, is expected to be introduced in both houses.

Tuesday Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul Hoffman are scheduled to appear at a joint hearing of the Senate and House foreign policy committees, thus starting weeks of hearings and debates.

A year ago ERP was a hotly debated issue on Capitol Hill, especially among the Republicans. To placate critics within his own party, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg then announced that "the first task of the next Congress and the next Administration next January shall be to resurvey this whole program in the light of experience and reality."

Was Thinking Republican

He meant, of course, a Republican Congress and a Republican Administration. Now a Democratic Congress will have to "resurvey" the program, and the job is expected to be relatively easy and free of controversy.

Many questions that agitated Congress a year ago have evaporated: The question, for example, whether the State Department would try to control the day-to-day operation of the program, or whether there would be friction between the embassies in Europe and the special ERP missions there, or whether the program would be run on a "sound business basis."

It is conceded that in its first year ERP saved western Europe from economic and political collapse, and that the program in general has been a success.

The new Congress, however, is

Sun Refuses To Hand Over China Leaders

Communist Demand For 'War Criminals' Rejected by Premier

Canton, China, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Chinese government will continue the civil war in "a fight to the finish" rather than hand over its leaders to the Communists as "war criminals," Premier Sun Fo declared today.

The Communists have newly insisted on arrest of Chiang Kai-shek, Sun himself and most other government figures as a condition for discussing peace.

"We expect an honorable peace, not a peace of abject surrender," Sun said at this "temporary" headquarters of his refugee cabinet. "We absolutely reject surrender of so-called 'war criminals.'"

"If the Communists wish to force us to accept such terms, the war must go on."

Sun said if the Red demand was merely a bargaining point, that was "another matter" and his government would continue its efforts for settlement despite what he called the Reds' illogical position.

Communist broadcasts, however, again insisted on the "war criminal" surrender and accused the government of being "completely hypocritical" in its peace pleas.

An unofficial peace delegation of Shanghai elders has obtained Communist permission to fly to Peiping, but has postponed its trip for "two or three days."

Another unofficial delegation of Nanking professors reached Peiping Sunday afternoon, landing safely despite bursts of Red anti-aircraft fire. Neither group has authority to negotiate peace, but both hope to explore the possibilities.

Acting President Li Tsung-jen is still in Nanking, where his supporters say he is exploring every possible peace avenue.

There was a growing impression that even if Li could arrange a surrender, the Canton cabinet might reject it and continue the war.

Sun Fo denied reports that Li had opposed the move to Canton. The premier asserted Nanking remained the official capital, saying the move to Canton was to prevent military pressure on Nanking from hampering peace efforts.

Nanking and Shanghai will continue to be defended, he said.

Fake Inspector Cleans Up Town In South Africa

Johannesburg, South Africa, Feb. 6 (AP).—A man in an official car, arrived in the little town of Hennenman in the Orange Free State gold fields recently, announcing he was a government health inspector.

Residents flocked to him with complaints. He condemned five buildings, giving the occupants seven days to vacate. He canceled two trading licenses, and gave the owners 24 hours to close shop. He gave another tradesman three days to make extensive repairs.

The town clerk got suspicious and learned the crusader had no connection with the government.

The "inspector" was arrested—but the town had the biggest clean-up in its history.

Jeer at 'Extra' Imports

Russians 'Swindling' Germans On Food Supplies, Say British

Berlin, Feb. 6 (AP).—The British leveled "swindle" charges today at Russian occupation forces in Germany.

A British Control Commission survey pictured the Soviets as leeching food from hungry Germans to fatten themselves and their export trade. At the same time, the survey alleged, the Reds pat themselves on the back as benefactors and promise to give back some of this food to their German zone if the people will produce more goods for them.

The jeering commentary replied to a Russian announcement that Moscow was sending extra food supplies for a million German workers and technicians and 30,000 intellectuals in the Soviet zone.

"The Soviet military administration continues to take food out of the eastern zone, not only for the occupation troops but also for delivery to the Soviet Union itself and as exports to other foreign countries—with profits booked to the Russians," the survey charged.

"The much-publicized food 'imports from the Soviet Union' are therefore, simply a bookkeeping swindle."

The British blast was touched off by a Russian announcement that Moscow had promised to send 52,000 tons of grain and fats to Germany in 1949 to feed the workers better. That would be about a third as much as the Allied airlift into Berlin in January alone.

The official Soviet army newspaper in Germany, Taegliche Rundschau, had asserted Russian imports would be a big factor in a promised ration increase for those in principal industries, and for intellectuals. By "intellectuals" the Russians mean researchers, scientist and inventors whom they have been wooing.

Life Signed Away

New York, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Josef Cardinal Mindszenty is a victim of tortures and drugs and his life was signed away by the Communists before the first witness spoke in his Hungarian treason trial, Francis Cardinal Spellman said today in one of his rare sermons.

Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, declared that if the free peoples of America and the world fail to unite for freedom in response to Mindszenty's "martyrdom," "we shall ourselves face Communist conquest and annihilation."

Speaking from the pulpit of St. Patrick's Cathedral, he charged that the trial of the Hungarian primate is the "crucifixion of humanity." He said he himself would confess to "treason" against his country before he would pledge allegiance to a Communist government in the United States.

Cathedral Is Packed

Spellman, who was elevated to the rank of Cardinal with Mindszenty nearly two years ago, wore his colorful red silk and white ermine robes during his sermon to approximately 5000 persons. The cathedral has seats for 3500, and the rest of the worshipers stood along the walls and packed the open spaces in the back of the building.

Spellman denounced Communists as "fiendish, ghoulish men of slaughter who worship the gods 'Stalin and Satan,'" and warned the American people they must abandon their "ostrich-like" attitude to save themselves from "trickery, tortures, disaster and defeat."

Roman Catholics throughout the Nation joined in solemn observance of "Cardinal Mindszenty Day"—a Sunday of prayer for the Hungarian primate and protest against his trial at Budapest.

"I must this day as a protest against the crucifixion of humanity entreat your prayers for persecuted, tortured, victimized Car-

Otto Predicts Slow Labor Camp Death for Cardinal

Salisbury, N. C., Feb. 6 (AP).—Archduke Otto of Austria predicts that Cardinal Mindszenty will be convicted of treason and his death sentence will be commuted.

"That," he said, "would be worse than death, for the cardinal would be sentenced to a labor camp and could not possibly live more than three years." The verdict is expected Tuesday.

Otto, son of Emperor Charles I of Austria, here on a lecture tour, said the cardinal undoubtedly is under the influence of drugs prescribed by a Russian physician.

He said the alleged plot against the cardinal was "built up day by day by Josef Stalin himself."

There is no doubt that the cardinal could have fled before the trial, the archduke said, but refused to do so because the Pope had ordered the clergy not to flee troubled spots.

Otto said his information came from the Hungarian underground.

After arrest, Otto said, the prelate was given scanty meals containing powerful drugs that dominated him. He withstood torture and was forced to stand for 82 hours.

Norwegian Foreign Minister Lange Has Seen Share of Unpacific Methods

A prewar pacifist and the son of a 1921 Nobel peace prize winner, Norwegian Foreign Minister Halvard Manthey Lange, 46, has seen his share of unpacific methods.

HALVARD M. LANGE
Arrives for Consultations

And it is because everyone fears another outbreak of unpacific methods of resolving differences that he arrived in Washington Sunday forenoon to discuss Norway's possible inclusion in the proposed Atlantic Pact.

To make things "easier" for Lange, veteran of German concentration camps, neighboring Russia continued its efforts to discourage Norway from joining the pact by handing him a tacit warning two hours before he left for Washington.

Lange, a native of Oslo, was 19 years old when his father, Christian Louis Lange, historian and Secretary-General of the League of Nations, was corecipient with K. H. Branting of Sweden of the Nobel peace prize. The boy was a scholarly, idealistic member of a scholarly professional family. He had been educated in Oslo, and at a progressive school in Brussels, Belgium, followed by further study in Geneva, Switzerland, and the London School of Economics.

He remained in London as an assistant secretary of the International Fellowship of Reconciliation from January 1923 until 1926, and then returned to the University of Oslo, where he received a master's degree in 1929.

He then turned to teaching, particularly of economic history and modern political history, and took an active part in Labor Party activities, at one time representing the party on the Oslo town council. He also found time during these years to write a history of Norwegian trade unions, a book on the Nazis and Norway, a study of political labor internationals from 1914 to 1934, and others.

When the Nazis invaded Norway in 1940, pacifist Socialist Lange joined the resistance movement. For a while he assisted in liaison work inside Sweden, helping Norwegian soldiers who fled across the border. Then, thinking the Nazis would overlook him, he returned, only to be jerked up by the Gestapo in August, 1940.

In June 1941 he was freed from the Oslo prison and began his activities in the resistance again. In August, 1942, the Gestapo caught up with him again. After six months imprisonment in Norway he was shipped off to the Sachenhausen concentration camp near the German-Polish frontier. His brother, August, was also sent to the camp where the smoke and stench of the burning bodies of prisoners was commonplace. Another brother, Carl, also was imprisoned by the Nazis, as was a sister, Thora, who died after imprisonment in a German camp.

Release for Halvard Lange came, after the German defeat, in May, 1945. In the Norwegian elections the following October the Labor Party won a majority in the Storting, or parliament. In a coalition government formed with the Communist Party and the People's Christian Party Lange became foreign minister in February, 1946, succeeding Trygve Lie, who had been named Secretary-General of the United Nations.

As foreign minister Lange has tried hard for peace. In 1946 he indicated that Norway's foreign policy would be to attempt to be "a connecting link" between the U. S. S. R. and the Western democracies. A few days ago he reminded the Kremlin of "our country's unbroken traditions in the work for peace," but he also said it was also necessary for the country neutral in World War I and neutral in World War II until invaded that it was necessary to seek security in regional pacts.

Tall Halvard Lange, who is careful of what he eats since Sachenhausen but whose sense of humor still builds friendships, is visiting Washington close on the heels of the youngest of his two sons. Christian Lange was among the group of 34 students of high school age from 17 Marshall Plan countries who last week visited Washington.

U. S. Official Confers With Dutch Minister

Prime Minister Willem Drees, the American official's presence in Holland "is of great importance, all the more so since he can exert his influence to make the situation either easier or tenser."

Cochran will go to Brussels Tuesday and leave from there for Batavia.

N. Atlantic Pact Expected InTreaty Form

By The Associated Press

Senators reported White House assurances yesterday that the North Atlantic security pact will be submitted to the Senate as a treaty—possibly within the next two months.

These assurances were said to have been given as the result of a move by Representatives, headed by Chairman Bloom (D., N. Y.) of the Foreign Affairs Committee, to cut the House in on approval of the proposed pact. Treaties don't go to the House.

Bloom and his colleagues will sit in when the Senate and House committees begin joint hearings Tuesday on a bill to authorize the second year's operation of the European Recovery Program.

House Seeks Voice

House members contend that they should share not only in approval of foreign spending programs but in the final decisions on such critical matters as the proposed defense alliance with friendly European countries.

Bloom and others carried this viewpoint to the White House last week, suggested to the President that it might be well to have the pact submitted to Congress as a resolution requiring majority approval of the two houses.

In the face of this, Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was said to have been told that the agreement will go to Capitol Hill as a treaty.

For ratification, a treaty needs two-thirds approval of Senators voting—a result that often has been more difficult to obtain than majority approval of both houses.

Administration leaders were represented as being confident that when they finally come up with a defense agreement between this country, Great Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg it will be in such form it will meet with little effective opposition.

Connally and Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), who were filled in on developments surrounding the treaty negotiations last week by Secretary of State Acheson, declined any comment.

If they can be satisfied on the form of the agreement, Administration leaders predict opposition within the Senate will be minor.

However, outside criticism of the proposed treaty came yesterday from James P. Warburg, financial adviser to the 1933 London Economic Conference and deputy director of the overseas branch of the office of War Information from 1942 to 1944.

Criticisms Listed

Warburg wrote Senators listing five reasons why the proposed pact should be examined closely.

He said the proposed treaty would protect some, but not all of the European nations and thus "invited aggression against the non-signatories."

Warburg noted that Congress probably will reserve to itself the right to declare war against an aggressor. For this reason, he said, signatory nations might be lulled "into a false sense of security."

As a third point, Warburg contended that rearmament of European countries would not be effective unless it includes rearming Germany and the stationing of large American forces in Europe. A plan to rearm friendly nations is a subject closely related to discussion of the treaty itself.

He said rearming Germany would split western Europe. Stationing large American military contingents in Europe also might provoke "countermeasures by the Soviet Union," he said.

Declaring that the best defense of western Europe lies in its economic rebuilding, Warburg said that to the extent American resources are diverted from economic aid to rearmaments, defense actually will be weakened.

Mock Kodiak Raid Alerts Whole of Aleutian Chain

Kodiak, Alaska, Feb. 6 (AP).—A wartime alert went into effect this weekend along the entire Aleutian chain in preparation for a mock raid on Kodiak by Navy carrier planes.

The attack is the first phase of Operation Icicle in which an American assault force of 40-odd ships and 18,000 men will attempt to recapture Kodiak Island from a hypothetical enemy.

Already search planes from the Naval Air Station here are scouting the sea for the Navy task force steaming northward to send its aircraft against the island.

An amphibious force of 2000 Marines has been here since Januanry 26, testing equipment under conditions to be faced in the event of war.

Russian Offer Expected for Swedes, Danes

Moscow, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Soviet proposal of a nonaggression pact to Norway may soon be followed by an extension of such treaties to Sweden and Denmark, foreign observers predicted today.

While claiming no inside knowledge of Soviet plans, they said such a move would be logical.

Russia yesterday offered Norway such a pact in a reply to a Norwegian note telling Russia that "caring for her own security," she was investigating the possibility of joining a North Atlantic pact.

Norway is the only nation on Russia's western border from Romania north which does not have a pact of "friendship and mutual aid" with the Russians. The nonaggression pact is another type of agreement which presumably would be much less comprehensive than those with Finland, Poland and some other countries.

(An Oslo dispatch said Norwegian statesmen were concerned and angered by the 'one of yesterday's note from Russia proposing the treaty. It said "the popular fortitude is not seriously affected by the Soviet note.")

The official Soviet newspaper Pravda published the complete text of the Russian note today and an item recording the departure of Norwegian Foreign Minister Halvard Lange for Washington "to receive information on the North Atlantic Pact."

Observers at the Western embassies here interpreted the note to mean that the Soviets would regard the simple fact of Norway's participation in a North Atlantic Pact as paving the way for the eventual granting of bases for Western armed forces and so deliberately intended.

Pravda's lead editorial today entitled "Why the United States Rejected the Proposal for a Peace Pact" contained the bluntest attacks yet on the North Atlantic Pact.

The editorial termed the proposed Atlantic pact "a concentrated expression of a policy of aggression and international risk-taking," and "the most important lever for preparing a new world war."

Educator Says Aid From U. S. Spurs Turks to Resist Reds

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

American aid to Turkey has given "enormous encouragement" to that nation in its will to resist communism, the president of the American College of Istanbul said here in an interview.

Black

This aid, extended under the Truman Doctrine and the Marshall Plan, said Floyd H. Black, has stimulated unusual Turkish interest in the English language.

Turkish newspapers carry frequent news stories and photographs of the arrival of American aid shipments, and American-directed highway construction, plus extensive military help to Turkey, give its citizens a vivid realization of the American programs, he said.

In Near East, Balkans

Black, who has worked in the Balkans and Near East since 1911 as a professor and college president, said: "Most Turks are fully cognizant of the danger to Turkey from the spread of communism."

In Turkey, he said, "English has now become quite common, and nearly everyone in educated circles who does not already know English, is studying it. Many listen to American and English broadcasts in English to help them learn the language."

From 1926 to 1942, Black was president of the American College of Sofia, Bulgaria. That school was closed by the Nazis, and in June, 1944, he became president of the American College of Istanbul, where he had previously served as professor for nine years.

For two years during the war he was in Istanbul as special assistant in the State Department's Foreign Service Auxiliary.

Makes Plea for Funds

His present visit to Washington included a trip to the State Department to urge maintenance and teacher-salary funds for his college under the Fulbright Act of 1946.

That act permits use of funds obtained through sale of United States' surplus property in foreign countries to send American students abroad to study, and to maintain foreigners at overseas American educational institutions.

The American College of Istanbul, a privately supported, nonsectarian, non-profit institution, is composed of the Robert College for Boys and the American College for Girls, with a capacity total enrollment of 1400.

"Like colleges here," said Black, "we're overcrowded and have our financial problems." Ninety per cent of the students are Turkish, he said. The college employes 130 instructors, 60 of them British and American.

Seeking Instructors

Chairman of the board of trustees for the girls' college is Virginia C. Gildersleeve, former dean of Barnard College and representative to the United Nations Conference at San Francisco. Dr. Walter Livingston Wright, jr., professor of Turkish at Princeton University, is chairman of the board of Robert College.

During his visit to this country, Black is seeking to recruit a few new instructors, "particularly two or three science teachers," he said.

He noted that living costs in Turkey have risen "just about as high as they have here, on the basis of United States dollars."

Sugar, he said, is three pounds for a dollar, and coffee and butter are each $1.25 a pound, although "meat is somewhat cheaper than it is here."

High living costs caused the fall of the Turkish cabinet last month, but the incoming government brought no change in Turkey's foreign policy, he said.

Russia Led Europe in Iron, Steel Output

Geneva, Switzerland (Monday) Feb. 7 (AP).—The Economic Commission for Europe said today the Soviet Union produced more iron and steel during 1948 than any other European country.

Statistics published by the United Nations body listed Britain a close second, followed by France and Germany. The United States produced more steel than all Europe, five times more than Russia.

All European countries except France exceeded iron and steel production goals for 1948. All countries, France included, recorded a considerable rise in total output.

Europe, including Russia, produced over 30 per cent more iron and steel in 1948 than in the preceding year and exceeded 90 per cent of the prewar average.

Total European steel output was 63,573,00 metric tons, against 49,-age of 70,430,000. (The metric ton is 2204.6 pounds.

The metric ton is 2204.6 pounds.

Up in 10 Major Areas

Crude steel production in 10 major steel producing areas of western Europe which are participating in the European Recovery Program increased during the first year of the program by nearly 10 million metric tons to 39,819,000 tons in 1948. That increase was recorded in Britain, France, the Saar, western Germany, Belgium, Luxembourg, Italy, Sweden, Austria and the Netherlands.

During the same period steel output of the six major steel-producing countries in the Soviet sphere increased by more than 4 million tons. The six countries—Russia, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary and the Russian zone of Germany—produced 22,-282,000 tons in 1948, compared with 17,881,000 in 1947.

The figures are based on information supplied by the producing countries and, in the case of Russia and Yugoslavia, on official estimates by the commission.

Russia's steel production was 16,500,000 tons in 1948, an increase of 3,500,000 tons during the year. Soviet pig iron production climbed to 14 million tons, an increase of 2,500,000.

Well Above Prewar

Britain produced 15,116,000 metric tons of steel and 9,425,000 tons of pig iron in 1948. Steel production in that country exceeded the prewar average by more than 3,000,000 tons and the 1947 total by 2,187,000 tons.

French steel production in 1948 was 7,255,000 metric tons, 1,500,000 tons above the 1947 total and 300,000 tons above the prewar average.

Total steel output in all four zones of Germany reached 5,738,-000 metric tons in 1948, an increase of more than 2,500,000 tons over 1947. Germany's 1948 total, however, was little more than one-third of the prewar agerage.

Of that total, 5,463,000 tons were produced in the American and British zones. Th eoutput there rose by 81 per cent during the year.

Czech Airline to Get Planes From Soviets

Prague, Feb. 7.—Soviet Russia has agreed to supply Czechoslovak Commercial Airlines with "a number of twin-engined transport planes which the Czechs were unable to buy in the west, it was revealed today.

The Czechs will receive the "fast and roomy" Soviet "Iljushin-12" and "also perhaps some four-engined craft of the Iljushin type," according to Obrana Lidu, Czech army newspaper.

Bunche Tells Of Progress Toward Truce

NYHT News Service

Rhodes, Feb. 6.—Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, acting Palestine mediator, declared today that progress was being registered in the Egyptian-Israeli armistice talks and that he would not under any circumstances terminate the negotiations until a pact had been signed.

He said both delegations had made concessions and no unbreakable deadlock was disturbing the slow advance toward military settlement of the war in southern Palestine.

Bunche's determination to continue as long as necessary has been communicated to both delegations. This means simply that the only way the armistice talks can fail is for one participant to take the responsibility upon itself.

The role of Dr. Bunche in any negotiations with other Arab states will depend entirely, he said, upon what the participants request. He is willing to continue as chairman at the wish of the Security Council and the belligerents.

So far none of the Arab states have answered his invitation to come to Rhodes. He expects at least one affirmative answer within a day or two.

Hyderabad About to Take Nazim's Land

Bombay, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—The Indian state of Hyderabad is ready to take over Sarf-i-Khas, the 700-square-mile estate of the Nizam of Hyderabad, who is believed to be one of the richest men in the world, dispatches from Hyderabad City said tonight.

These reports quoted Major General Choudhury, military governor of the princely state, as saying all big landowners have been given 10 to 15 days "to consider" a scheme under which all lands will be taken over by the state.

Until now the estate, hereditary property of the Nizam, has been untaxable. It reportedly produced an annual income for him of from 25 to 30 million rupees ($7,500,000 to $9,000,000).

Bombay newspapers said it is one of the largest private holdings in the world and one of the "most backward." The papers alleged its people had no adequate schools, hospitals, social or civic services.

(London newspapers said the Nizam had sold his holdings and planned to live in a modest house in England.)

Choudhury stated all landowners will be compensated, but that no "colossal lump sums" will be paid, the dispatches said.

The Nizam came into conflict with the Indian government last year when he refused to join his predominantly Hindu state with the Indian commonwealth.

Sixty Papers Banned in Iran

Tehran, Iran, Feb. 6 (AP).—More than 60 newspapers have been suspended and many newspaper editors and writers have been arrested by the military government as a result of Friday's attempt on the life of the Shah.

Martial law was imposed soon after an assailant, later identified as a newspaperman and a member of the leftist Tudeh Party, fired five shots at Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi, Iran's 29-year-old ruler. The Shah was hit by two bullets but injured only slightly.

The Tudeh Party was outlawed yesterday and its leaders taken into custody.

AFL Terms Stalin Peace Bid a Sham

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Miami, Fla., Feb. 6.—The American Federation of Labor's executive council today branded Stalin's bid for a face-to-face "peace" confab with President Truman as "an unmitigated sham designed to deceive well-meaning people."

The AFL leadership, a relentless foe of communism at home and abroad, reiterated and underscored its indorsement of the "firm policy" toward Russia carried out by President Truman and the State Department.

The council, in session here, declared that if "Dictator Stalin" and Russia want peace, they ought to start out by acting peaceably on the international front.

Actions Declared Necessary

"By this time we can be convinced of her sincerity only by action—not by more of the same hypocritical propaganda which, in the past, has been used as a camouflage for new outrages against international decency," the council said.

World peace and security, and the lack of progress in reaching that goal, is the most crucial problem of our times, the 15-man council said. Under the constant threat of recurring war, this country and other peaceful nations have to undertake elaborate defense preparations instead of working on constructive projects for the benefit of the people.

This "tragic situation"—the cold war—is "entirely and solely" the fault of Soviet Russia, the AFL leaders held, adding: "The hostile, provocative and aggressive policies adopted by Soviet Russia in relations with the western nations, the refusal of her diplomats to cooperate sincerely in the United Nations, and the commission of grave international crimes by Russia and her satellites have necessarily alarmed the world."

Firm Policy Backed

In backing up Mr. Truman's "firm policy" toward Russia, the council called for sufficient funds to be appropriated by Congress to bring the European Recovery Program to a successful conclusion and collaboration by our government in building a unified defense program for Western Europe.

Full support for the national defense program now being considered by Congress, was promised "even if the appropriations run into billions." Strengthening of the Merchant Marine through a program of construction and subsidies was urged.

The council will take up charges of Communist infiltration into the leadership of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, made up chiefly of AFL locals in Canada.

In Labor Cases
Injunction Little Used, NLRB Says

By the United Press

The injunction provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act played a "relatively minor role" in the first year of the law's operation, the National Labor Relations Board reported yesterday.

Up until June 30, 1948, NLRB General Counsel Robert N. Denham asked the courts to issue 21 injunctions or temporary restraining orders, the board said in its annual report to Congress.

Eight injunctions and four restraining orders were granted, four injunctions were denied and three cases were held on court dockets. Of these, one was withdrawn by the parties, one on motion by the board, and the third was still pending on June 30.

"Minor" Use Cited

The board cited "minor" use of the "much-discussed new injunctive procedure" in noting the number of labor dispute cases it settled without even the need for formal hearings and orders.

All in all, the 1948 fiscal year was a record year for the NLRB as it expanded from three to five members under provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act.

It closed 29,151 cases of all types nearly 90 per cent by settlement and dismissal. That was more than double the 14,456 figure for fiscal 1947, the previous peak year.

2079 Decisions Issued

It issued decisions in the 'unprecedented total" of 2079 cases, 12 per cent over its most active year under the previous Wagner Act..

It said the year brought an all-time high of 36,735 cases, close to three times the previous high. It ended the year June 30 with 12,642 cases pending, and reduced the number to 6110 by December 31, comparing with a backlog of 5058 on June 30, 1947.

The board reported that unions won 72.5 per cent of the collective bargaining elections it conducted under the Taft-Hartley act. This compared with a record of union victories in 81.4 per cent of elections conducted during the 12 years of the Wagner Act.

U. N. Group May Blueprint Truman Plan

Lake Success, N. Y., Feb. 6 (U.P.).—The United States may propose a special United Nations commission to blueprint President Truman's "bold new program" for aiding backward countries of the world, it was made known today.

American officials are considering introducing such a proposal at a late stage in the meeting of the United Nations Economic and Social Council opening today.

Official sources disclosed also that the United States would support a move for an international investigation of forced labor in Russia, eastern European countries and other parts of the world where slavery and semislavery are alleged to exist.

The American Federation of Labor, already promised the support of some of the 18 nations on the Economic and Social Council, plans to campaign at this session for a thorough inquiry into forced labor conditions. They want the International Labor Organization, an agency linked to U. N. a "specialized" body, to conduct the investigation.

The forced labor issue was one of several questions which promised to turn the Council session into one of the hottest and most important ever held.

Charred Bod' Of Woman Found On Mass. Road

Waltham, Mass., Feb. 6 (AP).—The still-smouldering, charred body of a slain woman, identified as a 40-year-old mother of two children, was found today on a little-used back road.

Medical Examiner T. Morton Gallagher said "there is no question that this is murder."

He added there was some indication the woman was struck a blow on the head before her clothing was doused with cleaning fluid and then set ablaze.

State police said the woman's clothing had apparently been pulled over her head before it was set afire.

The body was identified by Ira Rix of nearby Lexington as that of his wife.

35-Hour Week To Be Demanded By CIO Smelters

Cleveland, Feb. 6 (AP).—A major division of the CIO Smelter Workers Union voted today to push demands for a 35-hour week without pay cuts. Mounting layoffs were cited as the reason.

The policy was drafted by 50 delegates to a national conference. They represented about 20,000 workers in the diecasters, secondary smelters and tool and die sections of the union.

The shorter work week will be urged at the union's wage policy conference in Denver March 13.

U. S. Ponders 1949 Potato Price Puzzle

By the United Press

The Government conceded yesterday that its 1948 potato price support program, which thus far has cost the taxpayers 150 million dollars, left something to be desired.

The Agriculture Department said the program forced a lot of poorer grade potatoes into consumer channels, while the United States had to take millions of bushels of surplus top quality spuds out of the market for price support purposes.

Furthermore, it said, growers who refused to cooperate in efforts to hold down wasteful surpluses got more benefit from the support program than growers who restricted acreage.

The department acknowledged difficulties in announcing details of its 1949 program. It said last year's mistakes would not be repeated.

Elimination of the premium support price which the Government has been paying for top quality potatoes will fix it so the grower gives the Government—and not the consumer—his poorer grade potatoes, if there's a surplus, the department said.

And, officials declared, this will tend to reduce cost of the support program.

In addition, consumers are expected to benefit from lower supports for potatoes this year. The department said the supports will average $1.80 per 100 pounds for all potatoes of No. 2 grade or better of size 1⅞ inches diameter. This compares with an average price of $2.75 received by growers for all 1948 potatoes marked or sold to the Government.

Republicans Assure Full House Here Tuesday for Dewey Talk

By The Associated Press

Republican leaders have assured Gov. Thomas E. Dewey he will have a full house when he comes here Tuesday night to tell the GOP how he thinks it can win the next election.

These assurances were given in telephone calls to Paul Lockwood, the New York Governor's secretary. They followed the spread of rumors that some Republicans planned to boycott the Lincoln Day dinner sponsored jointly by District of Columbia League of Women Republicans and GOP House members.

Lockwood was told, an influential Republican said, that the defeated GOP presidential nominee will find all of the 900 seats filled in a local hotel banquet room and that he will get a "respectful" hearing.

Representative Martin of Massachusetts, the minority House leader, will speak on the same program, as well as Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine.

Senator Taft of Ohio, chairman of the Republican Policy Committee and an unsuccessful candidate against Dewey for the GOP nomination, expects to skip a Senate Labor Committee night hearing on the Taft-Hartley repealer, to listen to Dewey.

Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, chief Republican sponsor of the bipartisan foreign policy, will hear Dewey before leaving for Detroit for a Lincoln Day speech there Thursday.

But Representative Hugh D. Scott jr., handpicked by Dewey for national chairman at the Philadelphia convention last year, probably won't be on hand. He has been vacationing in California and will not leave there until Monday to begin a series of Lincoln Day talks.

Retail Bakers to Meet

Humphrey Favors U. S. Funds For Buying Evicted Housing

By the United Press

Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.) suggested yesterday that Congress provide money to buy and rerent the property of Midwestern landlords who want to evict their tenants in protest against rent controls.

He made the proposal as Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods predicted that Congress would quickly pass a stricter rent-control law.

Woods will be the first witness today when the House Banking Committee begins hearings on a two-year rent-control extension. Present controls are due to expire March 31.

Calls Action Irresponsible

Humphrey told reporters he considers the "landlord strike reprehensible and irresponsible" and not representative of the majority views of landlords.

"As one in the Government I call on United States Attorney General Tom C. Clark to use the full force of the law to require compliance with the law," he added. "If there is no law, Congress should take action to protect the people. One way would be for Congress to make available to States and municipalities money to buy the properties of these landlords and rent them to the tenants. It might be a good idea."

Charges Violation of Rights

Cole said they were a wartime measure which, when kept in peacetime, violate civil rights and "create monopoly and a favored class."

Nelson said there is more housing per thousand people today than there was in 1940 and "the problem is essentially one of maldistribution." He said a survey of 505 cities shows "the situation has eased off a great deal."

On the same broadcast Leo Goodman, CIO housing chief, insisted that Congress must retain a "strong" rent control program until the housing shortage is over. Representative Woodhouse (D., Conn.) supported the Administration bill.

Simplification Of Maryland Budget Urged

Baltimore, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Commission on Governmental Efficiency and Economy has urged that a State committee be set up to study simplification of the Maryland budget system.

Object of the committee would be to recommend corrective measures to replace "the State's present inadequate budget-making and control procedures."

The commission urged that the governor appoint or the legislature create such a group, so that its recommendations can be enacted by 1951 if practicable.

The commission, a private watchdog group, described the present "complicated" procedures as handicapping citizens and legislators who wish to understand budget-making or to participate constructively in it.

The $130,845,000 proposal for the fiscal year 1950 (July 1, 1949, to June 30, 1950) is really no budget, but merely an initial proposal, the statement said.

Under current procedure, the Governor presents a proposed budget which the legislature may reduce but not increase, it pointed out. Later in the legislative session the Governor presents a supplemental budget involving additional appropriations.

The commission, which describes itself as an "independent, nonpolitical, advisory group," is headed by Charles H. Buck.

The group added that the present system is not the fault of the State budget but of the law under which it must operate.

Federal Clerk Is Charged With Rape Attempt

A 24-year-old Department of Justice clerk was charged with assault with intent to rape after he was captured by a man passer-by and a policeman at 5:30 a. m. yesterday at 7th st. and Virginia ave. se.

Fifth Police Precinct Pvt. J. D. Sande identified the man as George McBride, 1432 Simms dr. se. Sande said a 30-year-old woman told him she was walking in the 700 block of E st. se. when McBride grabbed her and tore her coat in an attempt to rape her. Sande said the woman screamed, McBride ran and another man walking nearby, identified only as James Clark, gave chase.

Sande said he took custody of McBride a moment after Clark had captured him at 7th st. and Virginia ave. McBrid ewas taken to Police Headquarters and later released in $1000 bond for court appearance today.

Condon Calls for Revamping Of Outdated Building Codes

By the United Press

Dr. Edward U. Condon, head of the National Bureau of Standards, called yesterday for revision of city building codes to help solve a housing shortage "perhaps even more critical than is commonly known."

He released a survey showing that more than half the codes in existence are better than 11 years old, and most have not been overhauled for some time.

Some 200 cities and towns are revising their codes to take account of engineering advances in building construction, the survey showed.

The report said that out-dated codes sometimes "unduly restrict" the use of newer, more economical materials and designs, thus slowing home building.

Condon said the bureau must do more work on new scientific and engineering developments in housing, both in helping to work out new materials and designs, and in developing new ways to test their worth.

Drop in construction during the depression and a wartime freeze on home building, together with a population growth of about 28 million in the last 20 years, "means that today the housing shortage is perhaps even more critical than commonly known," Condon said.

Harris Sees Soviet At War With Christ

Mindszenty Is Guarded Constantly

By Edward M. Korry

Budapest, Hungary, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Josef Cardinal Mindszenty was kept under constant guard in his gray prison today while Budapest newspaper gave prominent display to selected passages from his final statement to the court trying him for treason.

Government press officials declined any details on how the cardinal spent his day except to say they "understood" he had celebrated mass alone.

Virtually all newspapers emphasized the cardinal's call for peace and his "regret" at his conflict with the law, but not his declaration that he was no "enemy" of the Hungarian people.

Special guards watched the cardinal and the six codefendants who will accompany him to the Budapest Peoples Court Tuesday to hear the verdicts and sentences.

Today's newspapers, many in almost uniform accounts, said the cardinal in his final statement yesterday "defended himself with his education and principles" and that "the cardinal declared that while he was answering to the court he was also answering to himself."

The Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, chaplain of the Senate, declared yesterday that the "so-called" trial of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty is the signal for a "war to the hilt" between Communism and Catholicism.

He told the congregation of Foundry Methodist Church, of which he is pastor, that the trial is also the "signal for war between an anti-Christian colossus and any church which refuses to submit to its supremacy and regimentation."

"This trial," he continued, "is only the first in a series of onslaughts that may be expected. In this fear-haunted world the battle is drawn between Christ and anti-Christ."

Trial of Christianity

"The cardinal is really on trial for defending the things which every Christian steadfastly believes. The plain fact is that he is simply anti-Communistic and that is the unpardonable sin with the present masters of the Kremlin and the puppet police states which they control," Dr. Harris declared.

Dr. Harris said the trial has been "following the usual Soviet pattern," in which the victim confesses, "at least partial guilt."

"One shudders to think of what diabolical torture rings such false admissions from human lips which before have spoken so uncompromisingly," he continued.

"New Day of Terror"

"So-called Christian churches who will agree to let 'politics' alone," he continued, "will not be molested. Silence and acquiescence may buy temporary safety. But to defy communism and its Godless implications is to court martyrdom in this new day of terror," Dr. Harris declared.

"Every Christian minister who has eyes to see the sinister significance of the cardinal's trial stands with him and for him as he sits in the prisoner's dock before the modern Pilates. With him in the dock is Christendom.

"This fight is not just between Roman Catholicism and communism. It is between a Godless communism and any type of Christianity worthy of the name," he concluded.

Banker Choked to Death On Steak, Autopsy Says

Rye, N. Y., Feb. 6 (AP).—An autopsy revealed today that Nathan McClure, a prominent Chicago banker, choked to death last night on a piece of steak.

McClure, 52, vice president of Harriman Ripley & Co., Inc., died at the annual banquet of the board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association.

Dr. Andrew A. Eggston, assistant Westchester medical examiner, said today he found "an exceptionally large" piece of steak in McClure's throat.

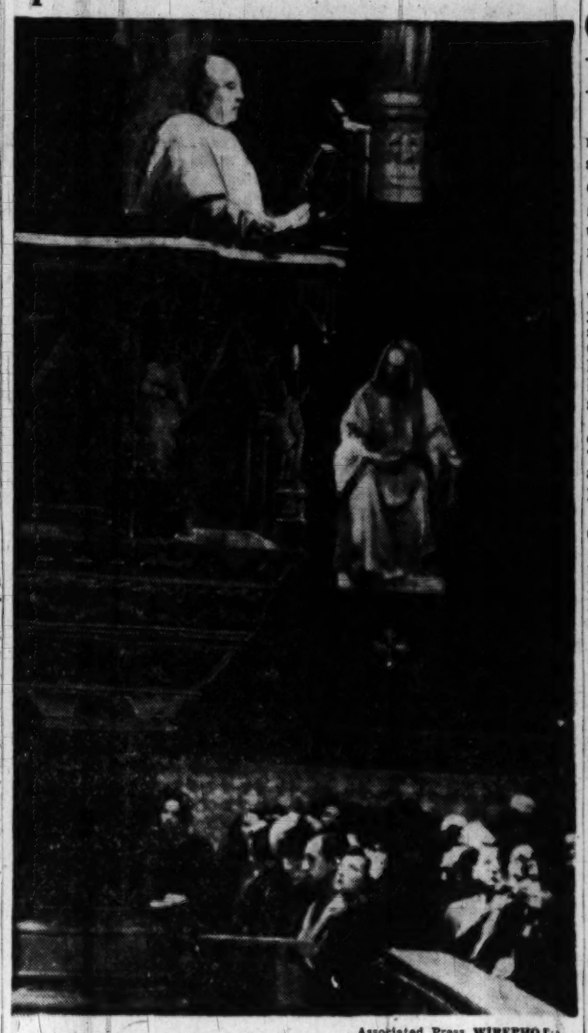
Spellman Denounces Trial



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

RARE APPEARANCE—Francis Cardinal Spellman stands in the pulpit of St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York City yesterday as he denounces the trial of Cardinal Mindszenty in Budapest as the "crucifixion of humanity." Cardinal Spellman made his first appearance in the pulpit since V-E Day

Mindszenty Seen Doomed

dinal Mindszenty," Spellman said.

He expressed the belief that Mindszenty had been drugged and tortured into confessing he was guilty "in principle and in detail of most" of the government's charges of treason, espionage and black marketeering.

"You have all seen pictures of Cardinal Mindszenty in the newspapers at his mock trail in his own country," Spellman said. "And all of you saw pictures of Cardinal Mindszenty when, a free man, he sat kindly, willingly for his picture here in America. Can you fail to see here a man tortured and drugged—even though the Communist press dares to print that he 'denies dures'? The Communists believe the American public is still easy fool, willing to be 'drugged' into believing whatever leaves them their own comforts, their own freedoms."

Spellman added that Mindszenty's jailers perhaps gave him drugs without his knowledge so they could break his will and show him to his people broken, weak and faithless, rather than as a martyr.

Fears Mindszenty Is Doomed

"When the cardinal confessed to treason against the present Communist regime in Hungary, he but professed his loyalty to his country," Spellman said.

"If this be treason—to deny allegiance to an atheistic Communist government, then thank God Cardinal Mindszenty confessed to treason—as I would—if this free land of America were ever conquerod by the demoniac people now using every foul means to overthrow our republic."

Spellman said Mindszenty was apparently doomed.

"There is no use to try to save Cardinal Mindszenty's life, for from the very hour he was taken away in the black of night from his home, his flock, his aged mother, Cardinal Mindszenty became the victim of torturings and druggings that put him beyond the reach of human help," he said.

"It was he himself who said to me when he was my honored guest less than two years ago—'My enemies can take from me no more than my life and that has already been given to God.' No, the physical Cardinal Mindszenty can no longer be saved.

"It is the spiritual Cardinal Mindszenty in his martyrdom of mind and body that we can fortify by our prayers, that in his soul he may know that in another part of the world other men are holding high God's torch of justice for Hungary's anguished peoples and the enslaved peoples of every land."

Spellman asked America to unite against the Communists:

"And in our own dear land each free man and woman must protect and fight to keep his own integrity of conscience, his own God-given freedoms—and expert every effort to save America and the rest of the democratic, God-loving world from trickery, torturings, disaster and defeat.

Lesson in Martydom

"For if we fail to learn a lesson from Cardinal Mindszenty's martydom, we shall fail ourselves and ourselves face conquest and annihilation . . .

"Had I a hundred tongues, a hundred mouths, a voice of iron, I could not compass all the crimes of the 'men of sin' as they wage war against the 'Man of Sorrows'; neither can I recount the miseries perpetrated by these slave men, crimes which it is neither my personal power to relieve or prevent.

"Nevertheless—so long as my heart beats and breath lingers in my body, I shall never cease to pray and labor to protect America, and warn and work against communism and all the evils growing from out its rotted roots, for 'rebellion to tyranny is obedience to God.'"

Red Cross Gifts Division to Make First Report

First reports on the Greater Washington Red Cross special gifts campaign are expected to be submitted at a luncheon to be attended by more than 100 volunteer workers at 12:30 p. m. Tuesday in the Federal room of the Statler Hotel.

Speakers at the luncheon, the first of three scheduled by the special gifts division, will be P. Y. K. Howat, vice chairman of the division, and H. Randolph Maddox, general chairman of the 1949 campaign in the Washington Metropolitan area.

Heading the special gifts groups, which is expected to complete its drive before opening of the general Red Cross campaign March 1, is John A. Reilly. Red Cross officials have not announced the division's quota, but said it represented a "substantial" part of the $924,000 goal for the Metropolitan area.

Mindszenty Career Hailed By Vatican

Rome, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, who two years ago said his country had "fallen upon days of misery and fear," is regarded in Vatican City as a spiritual servant whose wisdom is "a model for all Hungary."

Tracing the career of the man who was a parish priest for 29 years, Vatican City authorities said Mindszenty's rapid rise in the Catholic Church was due to the love its priests and people had for him, because of his courageous resistance to the Nazis.

His nomination to the rank of cardinal three years ago was "providential" for Hungary, the authorities said.

Exit Delayed in 1945

Not a familiar figure in Vatican City, Mindszenty suddenly assumed prominence at the end of 1945 when the Russians refused to give him permission to come to Rome. He finally arrived, but barely in time for the consistory.

On this visit in 1946 he saw Pope Pius XII twice in private audiences, reporting completely on his position and conditions in Hungary.

(Pope Pius will denounce the trial of Cardinal Mindszenty "at the first opportunity after the sentence is known," an authoritative source here said today.)

Mindszenty was born in 1892 in Czehimindszenty in the diocese of Sabaria and decided early to enter the priesthood. He was ordained June 12, 1915, when he was 23.

"He was one of the noted figures in the Hungarian episcopate from the start," Vatican sources said.

Became Bishop in 1944

In March, 1944, Mindzenty was elected Bishop of Veszprimia and in October, 1945, he became Archbishop of Esztergom, with the title also of Primate of Hungary.

Before the end of 1945 Pope Pius put the climax to Mindszenty's career by naming him one of 32 new cardinals to be created in the February, 1946 Consistory in Rome.

Mindszenty asked the Russians in January, 1946 for permission to come to Rome, but did not receive clearance until February 18.

Poles Crowd Archbishop's Installation

Warsaw, Feb. 6 (AP).—Archbishop Stefan Wyszynski, the new Roman Catholic primate of Poland, was enthroned Archbishop of Warsaw today. Thousands of Poles massed before the cathedral and sang "God Give Us Back Our Freedom."

The primate, who had been Bishop of Lublin since 1945, recently was appointed by the Vatican to succeed the late August Cardinal Hlond as Archbishop of Gneizno and Warsaw.

He is 47 years old and it is expected he will be made a cardinal at the next consistory. At his enthronement in Gneizno Wednesday he called upon Poland's millions of Catholics to "defend the dignity of the nation and the spirit of justice, freedom and peace."

Bishop Zygmunt Choromanski of Warsaw, handing the keys of the procathedral to the new primate in a ceremony witnessed by western countries' diplomats, said:

"The church is always trying to maintain good relations with the government.

"However, anything which might stand in the way of our maintaining our faith, we shall fight down such obstruction.

"The church does not believe in any party. The only correct politics are those of the church. We know the secret of victory—the victory of saving the whole world."

Representatives of Russia and other Communist nations did not attend the ceremony.

torture and were to be disregarded.

Pointing out that the Hungarian government refused visas to all but one American correspondent, Archbishop O'Boyle termed the Hungarian news sources "truly poisoned and biased." He said American papers could do nothing but print what their sources sent and leave it to the wisdom and intelligence of the readers to weigh the value of the reports.

The obvious aim of the Hungarian government and "the whole vile business of the rigged and fixed tral is to discredit the cardinal in the eyes of his people and the world," the archbishop said.

For the most part Archbishop O'Boyle said, no one has been fooled by the charges or "revelations" of the trial, which he termed "outrages upon common sense itself, if not silly obscenities unworthy of intelligent consideration."

"Nobody in his right mind can fail to perceive the utter fraud of the whole fearful farce which moves on to the end of destroying the utility of the cardinal as a God-given spokesman of the people in the defense and vindication of their human rights," he said.

"To those who know the cardinal—I have met him myself three times—there is the recollection of a strong and fearless man, undaunted and filled with a violent sense of justice.

"The change which must have takes place in such a man is a revelation not of weakness in him, God knows, but of the unknown terrors or drugs to which he must have been subjected and which to all appearances have left him another kind of man," Archbishop O'Boyle said.

Archbishop O'Boyle asserted that the closing of the defense "and the ludicrous apology of the defense counsel for his eminent client" is "the last straw in a great pile of foul straw."

"It is the descent to the lowest of indignities, but it is strictly conformable to Communist administration of justice which has as its primary purpose the ridicule of a person and his degradation in the eyes of his fellowmen, and then heaping insult upon injury to thrust him forth as a coward and weakling for the defamation of his fellow-citizens. It is nothing less than the moral destruction of an individual carried out in public and fortified by what is described as the 'process of law'," he said.

"This mock trial is a brazen attempt to conceal the ultimate purpose of destroying all organized opposition to the Communist Party in Hungary by using the device of the judicial process, and to discredit abroad a friend of the United States and a prelate of the Catholic Church," he said.

The Archbishop's sermon was one of a number of sermons in Roman Catholic Churches on what was designated as "Cardinal Mindszenty Day—a Day of Prayer and Protest" in the archdiocese. Throughout the day the most blessed sacrament was exposed in all churches. A holy hour of reparation in the evening concluded the observance.

Gale-Driven Snows Smite West Again

Chicago, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—A big new snowstorm driven by gales headed out of the northwest today on the dying heels of an earlier Western blizzard.

The blow came as the Army's big disaster force redoubled its efforts to clear away new snow across the frozen plains left by a blizzard of the last two days.

Forecasters said the new storm was a big one, spreading across Idaho, a tip of Oregon, Utah and Wyoming.

It carried drenching rains in the northern California valleys and heavy snow into the Rocky Mountain States.

Forecasters said it was too early to tell if the new storm will sweep the hard-hit Plains States east of the Rockies.

The blizzard of yesterday and Friday had piled up new drifts that closed 40 per cent of the roads opened in South Dakota by Fifth Army bulldozers, as well as 1250 miles of roads in Wyoming and a few in Nebraska.

Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, commander of the bulldozer operation, said at Omaha, that the Army was "meeting the situation" and expected to have all roads open and communications restored by tonight.

Pick said airlift operations were being cut to bare necessities as more and more roads opened. The Air Force dropped only 24 tons of hay in the disaster area yesterday.

'Honor System'

Foreign Aid Price Check Is Approved

By The Associated Press

An "honor system" under which prices for Marshall Plan goods are policed after they are paid for has been approved by a committee of four former OPA executives, a foreign aid official disclosed yesterday.

They agreed that price ceilings are unwise, he said.

Businessmen have "conducted themselves pretty well" in the multi-billion dollar supply job without being subjected to ceiling by the Economic Cooperation Administration, ECA Price Chief Samuel Nakasian said.

ECA's guards against Marshall Plan profiteering are few. One is persuasion. Another is a careful check-back on sales already made. If an overcharge is found, a refund is demanded of the European government which paid the excessive price. Few have been demanded.

"ECA's price policy has had a restraining effect on prices charged throughout the entire export trade," Nakasian told a reporter.

Some tightening of the price-checking system is likely, however, he said, as a result of studies started in October by a group of war-time price control officials at the request of ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman.

The group is expected to make a final report soon, Nakasian said, and already has submitted some preliminary findings.

ECA's basic formula is to finance essential foreign purchases if the price is at the prevailing market level. ECA also expects to get the benefit of all customary discounts.

Snowbound Hens Fill House With Eggs

Crawford, Nebr., Feb. 6 (AP). A Fifth Army bulldozer crew, breaking through to the snowbound Bob Soefter home 15 miles east of here, arrived just in time for breakfast—of eggs.

Since December 31, the last time the Soefters got out, hens had filled every basket and container on the place.

There were some left over, too. Eighty-six dozen were piled on the kitchen floor.

the machine by the judgment and conscience of the people as a whole requires that we be an informed people.

"Faith in the people must have as its corollaries faith in the facts, faith in the power of knowledge, faith in the free flow of ideas, and hence faith in education and the processes of education.

"These are the very pillars of our free society."

Earlier Lilienthal had posed several questions that, he remarked, "concern every last one of us:"

"What kind of Army, Navy and Air Force do we now require, in the light of these new discoveries?"

"What are safe and what are unsafe methods of international control of atomic energy to prevent its use as a surprise weapon?"

"How extensively should the American people support medical research in this field, and similarly research in nutrition and in increasing the production of food by novel methods opened up by these new developments?"

Asks Corporation's Place

"What should be the place of private corporations in this brand-new technology, an industry that unlike anything the world has ever seen before was a giant at birth, and wholly Government-owned?"

"How do the people see to it that our universities and research institutions shall remain free of Government or military control when it is necessary that such vast sums for research and development be provided to them by the Federal Treasury?"

"How can the people see to it that narrow politics and pork barrel methods are kept strictly out of this huge scientific, industrial and educational enterprise?"

"How can we maintain essential secrecy without drying up the very well-springs of scientific and technical advance, which flourishes not in secrecy but in openness and free discussion?"

"The questions are manifold," he said. "The answers, the decisions, will affect directly the future well being of the 145 million stockholders in this atomic enterprise, that is, the people of the United States.

"They will indeed affect every human being on the globe."

then entered the store. One of the two assailants followed him, accused him of having called the Second Precinct station and then both men pummeled, kneed and kicked him, he said. They then shoved him into an automobile, drove around the block, and shoved him out of the car in front of the drugstore.

Meanwhile, a second investigation of the case has run into a dead end.

Probed as Simple Assault

This is the investigation normally undertaken upon any routine report made to police. When the information that Rowell had been beaten was forwarded from Garfield Hospital by a Thirteenth Precinct policeman to the Second Precinct station, the case was investigated as a simple assault, police said yesterday.

Precinct Detective Paul Hutsler was assigned to make this investigation. Interviewed yesterday, Hutsler said he was at a dead end.

He said he has talked to everyone concerned in the case, but had "gotten nowhere." Hutsler said he has made his report to Captain Strange.

Captain Strange said, "we are handling this case like any other case. We have more than a hundred assaults a month in this precinct. We have done everything we can and there is nothing else we can do until we get some new information or some kind of a tip in the case."

expected to have at least three serious doubts. One is whether the recipient countries of western Europe have done all they could to cooperate with one another, as they promised they would.

On this point Special Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and his mission chiefs in Europe are stuffed with answers to show, first, that western Europe has done a good job; second, that much more remains to be done; and third, that western Europe probably can stand on its own feet by 1952 if the United States continues to support ERP in the meantime.

The second main doubt is whether western Europe as a whole really can become free of American aid by 1952, in spite of the optimism often expressed by Hoffman, Harriman and their aides.

The Organization for European Economic Cooperation in Paris, representing all of Marshall Plan Europe, has just estimated that there will still be a three-billion-dollar gap in 1952 unless present national plans are drastically revised and integrated with those of neighboring countries.

In other words, the Europeans themselves concede that they must make a vastly greater effort if the Marshall Plan is to end in 1952 without a new collapse. And this leads to the suspicion, which may be voiced in the coming hearings, that some countries like Greece will have to be helped beyond four years in any case, and that perhaps the four-year time limit was too short for western Europe as a whole.

The third main doubt has to do with European rearmament. How, it will be asked, can you expect European countries to balance their budgets and conquer inflation, and at the same time divert money and resources to rearmament? And how can you expect Congress to vote funds for economic recovery without knowing how much will be needed for Europe's military security?

The Administration's answer will be that western Europe is already spending the equivalent of about eight billion dollars a year on defense; that its added efforts will represent only a relatively small increase over present expenditures, and that an intelligent balance has to be struck between the needs of economic recovery and military security.

If members of Congress insist on knowing an over-all figure of American spending for rearming western Europe, the answer will be a ceiling of two billion dollars for all foreign military aid in the coming year, whether in western Europe, in Greece and Turkey, or in Latin America.

Officials' chief worry, as they face the new congressional hearings, is the unending pressure on them to dump American surpluses abroad in ECA shipments. The pressure has not slackened in recent months, although the character of ECA shipments has begun to shift from relief supplies, like grain, to machinery and other so-called recovery goods.

Are Busily Lobbying

Producers of cotton, tobacco, grain, lumber and even grapefruit juice and prunes are lobbying busily to have the new ECA law take care of their products, whether Europe needs them or not. This pressure may be even more formidable in a Democratic Congress than in a Republican, since many of the new members of the Democratic majority come from farm districts in the Middle West and Far West.

Except for the cost, the new bill differs only slightly from the existing act. The cost will be around $4,400,000,000 for the fiscal year beginning July 1, compared to $5,300,000,000 sought for the first 12 months of the program.

This carries out the promise made a year ago that the amount of American help would dwindle year by year until the program ends in 1952. The new figure does not include proposed help for China, Korea or other non-Marshall Plan areas, nor does it include an additional $1,250,000,000 that is needed for the three months from April 1 to June 30 of this year.

Shipments of Cotton To China Are Halted

By the United Press

The Economic Cooperation Administration has halted cotton shipments to China, the director of its China program said yesterday.

Harlan Cleveland, head of the ECA program for China, confirmed cotton belt reports to that effect.

"Cotton shipments to China have been held up for the time being," he said.

About 100,000 bales of cotton are involved in the suspensions according to an ECA estimate. The spokesman said the action was taken because ECA does not want to build up cotton stocks in China in view of the unsettled political situation.

Atomic Group Extends Ore Price Guarantees

The Atomic Energy Commission announced today it is extending its minimum price guarantees for certain types of uranium-bearing ores until June 30, 1954.

The floors, placed on carnotite-type and roscoelite-type ores of the Colorado plateau area, are aimed at encouraging investment in development of new mines. The extension does not affect the guaranteed minimum prices for high-grade ores, which are not due to expire until 1958.

Columbia U. Dean Backs Health Insurance Plan

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—The dean of Columbia University's medical faculty today came out in favor of a broad system of voluntary health insurance that would give families full medical care.

Dr. Willard C. Rappleye said such a system is needed, although it has been "largely unsupported by the organized medical profession, whose policies continue to be almost exclusively determined by those who are primarily concerned with retaining the status quo."

Rappleye made the statement in his annual report to Columbia president Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

President Truman's veto of the Taft-Hartley bill.

Five Republican Representatives meanwhile announced they would introduce a bill giving the Government power to deal with strikes involving National emergencies. The Administration-sponsored labor bill eliminates a Taft-Hartley act provision spelling out the right of the President to obtain an injunction to force an 80-day cooling off period in major strike situations.

Attorney General Clark has ruled the President has inherent and constitutional powers to stop strikes affecting the Nation's health and welfare. The five Republicans would give the President the power to direct unions and employers to "cease or avoid work stoppages" and specifically authorize the Attorney General to enforce the President's orders in the Federal courts.

The sponsoring Republicans are: Auchincloss and Chase, both of New Jersey; Robert Hale of Maine, and Herter and Heselton, both of Massachusetts.

There also were some indications yesterday that the House Education and Labor Committee may delay action on the Administration's labor bill. The committee has been in a snarl since a subcommittee voted last week to recommend a flat repeal of the Tart-Hartley law and the reenactment of the Wagner Act without change. The full committee may vote on its subgroup's proposal Thursday.

Again three Southern Democrats on the Labor Committee voted for the Taft-Hartley law while a fourth Democrat, Powell of New York, is ill and not expected to return to duty for at least a week. With a party division of 16 Democrats to 9 Republicans, some Democratic leaders fear a test vote on the subcommittee's recommendations may bring a 12-12 tie.

Glencarlyn School Tract Is Purchased

Merry Menagerie—By Walt Disney

"There's a new 12-day diet in this paper, and I'm trying it!"

Purchase of a site for a six-room Glencarlyn Elementary School was announced yesterday by the Arlington County School Board.

Consisting of 14.1 acres, the site is on the southwest corner of Lee blvd. and Carlyn Spring rd., about four blocks from the present two-room Glencarlyn School.

The board bought the site Saturday, it was announced, from Wilcher-Back & Co., Inc., for $62,172.

The unusually high price, the board said, was because part of the property had been zoned for commercial use. Part of the site will be set aside for a junior school, the board added.

The purchase was announced at a meeting at Glencarlyn School where the school board explained preliminary plans.

The plans will be sent to Richmond for approval by the State Board of Education. The school is part of a $6½ million county school building program.

British War On American Slang's Vogue

London, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Britain's two major political parties were united today on the desirability of removing American slang from the speech of coming generations.

Conservatives and Laborites alike hoped the proposed National Theater in London would restore the language of Shakespeare to the tongues of British youngsters.

For the Conservatives, Oliver Lyttelton provided the House of Commons Friday with an imitation of an American mother teaching her daughter English poetry. He drew roars of laughter from his colleagues with what he thought was a Brooklyn accent.

Mrs. Leah Manning, speaking for Labor, said the National Theater will give children the opportunity to hear English beautifully spoken.

"So many of our children speak in clipped and ugly speech and American idiom, which is very unfortunate," she said. Mrs. Manning is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Perett of Rockford, Ill.

The Daily Herald devoted a column editorial to praise of Commons in giving the theater bill its third reading.

Average Income Per Family Put At $3000 in 1947

By The Associated Press

The average income of U. S. families was $3000 in 1947, the Census Bureau reported yesterday, adding that was the highest figure up to that time.

The bureau found that income was distributed among the Nation's 37 million families in this fashion:

Four million had under $1000, six million had $1000 to $2000, eight million $2000-$3000, eight million $3000-$4000, four million $4000-$5000; three million $5000-$6000, three million $6000-$10,000, and one million $10,000 or more.

Thus only four million families—or slightly fewer than one out of each nine families in the Nation—had in that year the $6000 which President Truman has suggested as the starting point for the income tax increase he has asked Congress to consider.

A Light From the Eternal Flame of France . . .

By William Klemm—The Washington Post

TORCH PLACED AT TOMB—National Commander Perry Brown of the American Legion, places a sacred torch, lighted from the Eternal Flame that burns beneath the Arch of Triumph in Paris, at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier yesterday. Participating in the ceremony at Arlington Cemetery are Pierre Triou (left, saluting), president of the Federation of French War Veterans, who presented the flambeau, and French Ambassador Henri Bonnet (right)

French Torch Symbolized At Ceremony

A torch lighted from the "Eternal Flame" which burns under the Arc de Triomphe in Paris flamed yesterday before the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier as a token of Franco-American friendship.

It was one of two symbols of the 176 years of peace between France and the United States presented by French war veterans to American veterans in a ceremony attended by high French officials at Arlington National Cemetery.

The torch—whose mother flame in Paris commemorates the French Unknown Soldier—was brought to Washington on the Merci Train.

It was presented before the Unknown Soldiers' Tomb here by Pierre Triou, president of the Federation of French War Veterans in the United States, to National Commander Perry Brown of the American Legion.

Flag Also Presented

The ceremony also included presentation of the only flag left flying at Le Havre after the city's destruction in World War I.

The flag was given by Rodolphe E. Rufenacht, president of the War Veterans of Le Havre, and accepted by Owen C. Holleran, American Legion executive committeeman for the District of Columbia.

French officials taking part included Michel Junot, Chief of Cabinet for Prime Minister Henri Queuille and head of the French Gratitude Train delegation, Ambassador Henri Bonnet and Col. Jacques de la Boisse, military attache.

Carried To Each State

The friendship torch will be carried by the Merci Train to each State in the Union for acceptance by each Legion Department in the name of the people of each State.

At the end of the tour, during which the flame will be kept burning continuously, the torch will be placed in the Legion's national museum at Indianapolis.

The flag from Le Havre will be kept at the Legion's District Department headquarters and later sent to the national museum.

10,000 Welcome Merci Train

Territory of Hawaii. The token gift was presented to Salvind O. Olsen, chairman of the National Capital Merci Train Committee.

To Display Gifts

Gifts destined to remain in the District will be catalogued today and placed on display sometime tomorrow in the windows of Woodward & Lothrop. They will remain there for about one week. Final distribution of the gifts to galleries and museums will be made later.

Among the gifts this city will receive are a blue Sevres vase and a gold watch contributed by a French family who gave it to "mark only happy hours for the American people."

Rare glassware, historic documents and gifts, and a statue of Benjamin Franklin by Houdon are also among the contents of the District's car, train officials said. The box cars, themselves, nine of which are southbound, will remain on view until Monday at 6 p. m. on the 14th and D sts. sw. siding, opposite the Bureau of Engraving.

As the train arrived yesterday, an American Legion honor guard stood at attention. Other groups participating in yesterday's ceremony included the Metropolitan Police Band, the French War Veterans, a group of French Boy Scouts, American Boy and Girl Scouts, District High School Cadets and the American Legion's fun organization, the Forty-and-Eight.

Three of the nine southbound cars of the train will stop briefly at 9 a. m. today in Quantico, Va., and at 9:45 a. m. at Fredericksburg, Va. Another section will halt at Charlottesville at 9:45 a. m. Tuesday and at Lynchburg at 12:15 p. m.

Civil Liberties Get Backing Of President

By The Associated Press

President Truman spoke out yesterday for a program of civil liberties "guaranteeing to all people the heritage of freedom . . ."

In a letter to E. Raymond Wilson, chairman of the National Citizens Conference on Civil Liberties, the President said:

"We must provide a solid foundation for the future growth of our country. Of great importance to the present and future generations of America is the development of a program of civil liberties guaranteeing to all people the heritage of freedom which we have received from the founders of this Nation.

"A free system can endure only when there is freedom of opinion, expression and conscience.

"Your conference has a great responsibility in formulating the kind of program which will give added strength to the principles of freedom which have come down to us from the fathers of the Constitution."

The National Citizens Conference invited more than 150 national organizations to take part in its gathering here February 15-16.

20 Held for Black Market

Rome, Italy, Feb. 6 (AP).—Police said today that 20 persons have been arrested in connection with an alleged black market ring which acquired American canned goods destined for welfare organizations and shipped them to Yugoslavia.

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny

Ever have a "ring and run" telephone caller? Yesterday afternoon, I was out in the kitchen making up some cookies to send to my nephew Tom (Tom is a corporal now at Camp Lee). Just when I was up to my elbows in cookie dough, the telephone began to ring.

I washed my hands as quick as I could and hurried in to answer it. But whoever it was that called only waited a few rings and then hung up. By the time I got there, there was no one on the line. I do wish people would give a body a minute to answer the telephone!

I suppose things like that work both ways, however. Perhaps I haven't been so patient, either, when calling other folks. From now on, I'm going to wait at least ten rings before I hang up.

Filibuster Fight

Politics is playing a large part in the maneuvers of both parties in regard to curbing filibusters in the Senate. In moving to discharge the Senate Rules Committee from further consideration of amendments to the cloture rule Senator Knowland doubtless hopes to embarrass the Democratic members as well as to give the Senate a weapon against unlimited debate. The Democrats, on the other hand, are determined not to let a Republican Senator take this ball and run with it. While they are exerting herculean efforts to hold the two wings of their party together on numerous other important issues, they naturally wish to avoid a showdown on this highly divisive issue.

We surmise that the problem will come before the Senate in the most favorable light if the Rules Committee is given time to make its report. As Majority Leader Lucas has pointed out, the committee has not been stalling. It concluded hearings in eight days, and there are indications that it may have a resolution ready for the Senate on Wednesday. Certainly it would be a discourtesy to the committee to snatch the issue from its hands before a reasonable period for deliberation has passed.

There is, however, another side to the controversy. Actually the Senate has been stalling on filibuster reform for many years. Probably all the hold-over members know how they will vote. The reluctance to take an antifilibuster measure to the floor of the Senate springs largely from fear that this measure itself will run into a filibuster. But if this fear is always to prevent action, the evils of filibustering will always remain. Sometime the issue must be faced, and we hope that sometime will be soon. The indications are, moreover, that no effective antifilibuster proposal can be expected from the Rules Committee. Chairman Hayden says that there will be no chance of even improving the present cloture rule (requiring a two-thirds vote) unless Senators can reach an understanding that future debate will not be cut off by majority vote. Anything less than majority cloture would leave the Senate hamstrung. Mr. Hayden's negative attitude means that the impetus behind this reform will have to come from other sources. But if the fight is to be centered on the evils of the filibuster and not upon tactical maneuvers, the Rules Committee will have to be given time enough to make its report.

Federal Contributions

If the Federal Government paid taxes at prevailing rates on its property holdings in the District, as Representative Keating suggests, the District would receive an estimated 16 million dollars from this source. That is five million more than the present Federal contribution to the District's running expenses. While the loss of potential revenue resulting from the tax-exempt status of local Federal holdings provides a strong argument in favor of increasing the size of the Federal contribution, there is little likelihood that Congress would agree to any proposal entailing taxation of Federal property on the same basis as privately owned property. Direct taxation of federally owned property here would establish a precedent for similar taxation of Federal holdings by States and municipalities in all parts of the country. As a matter of fact, Representative Keating urged abolition of tax exemption for all Federal properties wherever located.

The problem is undoubtedly one of Nation-wide concern that led the American Municipal Association to go on record recently in favor of Federal legislation authorizing local taxation of Federal property or, as an alternative, payment to the municipalities by the Federal Government of annual sums in lieu of full taxes. Various Federal agencies are already empowered to make payments to local government, but, as we pointed out some time ago, these payments are haphazard and often inequitable because of their special character. Consequently, there is pressing need for a change of policy to relieve local governments of the burdens thrust upon them by the withdrawal of Federal land from taxation. In the case of the District, more than 40 per cent of the land area is tax-exempt because of Federal ownership.

There are certain types of Federal holdings, such as postoffices, jails and hospitals, that ought not to be taxed in any circumstances. There are also undeveloped landholdings in some States whose taxable value would be hard to assess and whose possession by the Federal Government probably yields indirect dividends to local communities that largely offset loss of taxable revenue. For such reasons it would be unwise to give local governments carte blanche authority to tax federally owned property of all kinds at prevailing local rates. But it is both feasible and essential to work out a plan that would insure adequate compensatory Federal payments and compel the Federal Government to pay its fair share of the cost of local governmental services that benefit all property holders—public as well as private. In most cases the size of these payments should, with certain exceptions such as those previously mentioned, be roughly equivalent to the amount of revenue that would be collected if Federal property were fully taxable.

Strike Emergencies

President Truman's claim that, in the absence of specific legislation, he would have access to the courts to enforce the recommendations of a fact-finding board in any labor dispute causing a national emergency, drastically changes the nature of the problem before the Senate Labor Committee. When the Administration's bill was first introduced, it was assumed that the only sanctions behind its title dealing with national emergencies were presidential persuasion and public opinion. As now interpreted by the President and the Attorney General, this section becomes potentially more drastic than the comparable provision of the Taft-Hartley Act, which limited to 80 days the injunctive restraints upon strikes threatening the national safety and welfare. Obviously, if the President has the power claimed, it could be used to obtain permanent as well as temporary injunctions.

The reasonable implication is that the President is seeking to strengthen the existing method of dealing with work stoppages that imperil the national economy. We think he is right in doing so, even though we deplore the method he proposes to use. Neither organized labor, nor Congress, nor the general public will feel free to leave this vital realm of policy-making solely to the discretion of the President and the courts. The Senate Labor Committee would do well to recognize this promptly and prepare to write into the bill a new method of dealing with labor-management disputes that imperil the public interest.

In our opinion, the President ought to have ample power to end industrial paralysis of this character whenever the danger point has been reached. The trouble with the existing provision is that it puts more pressure upon striking unions than upon employers. Injunctions may be used to break a strike, at least temporarily, but no comparable penalty may be visited upon the employer whose arbitrary conduct may be the chief cause of the strike. The remedy is not to take away the right of injunction and leave the Government helpless to protect the national interest but to give it power to bring arbitrary employers as well as unions into line. This could be done by authorizing the Government to seize and operate struck plants, if the employer should refuse to accept the recommendations of a fact-finding board and continuous operation of the plant should be found essential to the national interest.

Emergency boards set up under the Taft-Hartley Act are restricted to reporting facts without drawing conclusions. That seems to have been a mistake. Fortunately, the Thomas bill provides that such boards shall lay before the disputing parties and the public their recommendations as well as their findings of fact. If the parties still cannot agree on the basis of those impartial recommendations, the President should be in a position to restrain either or both from inflicting further damage upon the national welfare. That could be done by means of injunctions in the case of recalcitrance on the part of labor and by plant seizure in the case of recalcitrance on the part of the employer. Since it is now obvious that the injunction will be used whether or not authorized by statute (if the courts will tolerate that dangerous stretching of the executive power), this means of balancing up the sanctions that may be applied ought to have a special appeal for a Congress which is seeking to curb the excesses of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Abuse Of Patronage

Action on the nomination of Mark F. Ethridge as a member of the United Nations Peace Commission for Palestine has been held up at the request of Senator Chapman, presumably because the Louisville Courier-Journal of which Mr. Ethridge is the publisher, supported Mr. Chapman's Republican opponent in the recent senatorial contest. Senators are notoriously quick to resent and resist invasion of their traditional right to object to nominees from their own States who are for any reason, good or bad, "personally obnoxious" to them. The extension of the merit system has severely restricted the opportunities for dispensing jobs as political rewards. For that reason Senators cling all the more determinedly to the privileges accorded them by consent of their colleagues to reject a presidential appointee selected without first consulting them.

This limited patronage system opens the door to grave abuses especially when, as in the present instance, the candidate's qualifications for office are not in question. Moreover, the position to which Mr. Ethridge has been assigned is a temporary one, and his salary is paid by the United Nations. Clearly the President and the Department of State should be left free to select for such a position the man whom they regard as best fitted to represent the country. If the Ethridge appointment should be blocked because of Senator Chapman's personal grudge, it will become a powerful argument for abolishment of the discredited system of senatorial patronage.

Blood Of The Martyr

What methods were employed by the Communist jailers of Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty to induce him to plead "partly guilty" to the charges brought against him at his trial must remain a matter of unpleasant conjecture. The repertory of the MVD in these dark arts is apparently exhaustless; and considering the importance of the case to Communist propaganda it seems not unlikely that specialists were sent from Moscow to direct the inquisition. At the Vatican it is believed that the Cardinal has been subjected to prolonged physical and mental tortures, and then, to quote the euphemism almost as horrible as the concrete fact, "reconditioned" for his public appearance.

Other Catholic sources have suggested that his resolution had been broken by doses of hypnotic drugs. Such surmises were given some plausibility by a photograph taken of the Cardinal, as he sat beside his guard in the courtroom at Budapest, and transmitted by radio to the United States and published in American newspapers last Saturday. The expression of the Primate's face, his posture and the attitude of his hands seemed to indicate a man in a state of acute nervous dread. However, photographs are sometimes deceptive, and this one had been heavily retouched to make it suitable for publication, so that it is hardly conclusive evidence in itself.

Apparently only one American was present at the trial. This was Mr. Edward Korry, Balkan correspondent of the United Press, to whom the Hungarian government at the last moment granted a visa. The Associated Press was obliged to rely on a native Hungarian correspondent, Endre Marton. For this reason many American news editors to whom both services were available gave precedence to Mr. Korry's dispatches. Between the accounts transmitted by the two news services there were some differences, not so much of fact as of emphasis. At the conclusion of the trial Mr. Korry refused to join the other correspondents in a statement that there had been no censorship, pleading that it was contrary to the rules of his organization. However, he made an independent statement that his own dispatches, telephoned from Budapest to Prague and London, had been in no way interfered with, and that he believed the translations of testimony supplied by his Hungarian associate to have been accurate.

An analysis of the admissions reported to have been made by Cardinal Mindszenty at his trial suggests that he was then at least in full or nearly full possession of his faculties. He denied the accusation of treasonable conspiracy to which he was earlier reported to have confessed, but acknowledged that he had condoned black market dealings by other Catholics even though he had not engaged in them himself. He said that he was guilty "in principle" of many of the charges against him.

Viewed, however, in the light of the Cardinal's own moral system, which assumes a law higher than that of the state, and makes obedience to secular authorities depend upon their conformity to such a law, this was hardly an admission of guilt at all. It was merely an admission that he was guilty under the principle of guilt defined by the police state. Thus it seems a possible inference that at sometime before his trial Cardinal Mindszenty had, after a search of conscience, reached some kind of understanding with his persecutors. For reasons not now known, possibly the protection of others, he may have consented to a formula of confession which the Communists considered suitable to their propaganda purposes, but upon which his coreligionists would be able to put an altogether different interpretation. This inference gains further plausibility from his final statement to the court, in which he expresses his desire for peace between church and state.

What is utterly improbable is that he believed that his statement would alter or mitigate the punishment upon which his enemies have long since resolved. His doom is certain. But it is also certain that the reverberations caused throughout the world by his arrest and trial will not subside with his death.

ECA Retraction

Following an intensive six-week investigation, the ECA has formally cleared Great Britain, Belgium and Holland of charges of profiteering from resales to American companies of lead and aluminum scrap originally bought with ECA dollars. ECA Deputy Administrator Bruce, who was responsible for broadcasting these unjust charges, has done penance for his indiscretion by admitting that a more complete study of facts and figures shows that a substantial part of the imports of the two metals reported as coming from Great Britain and Holland were in-transit shipments originating elsewhere, while much of the lead shipped from Belgium had been sent there for processing en route to the United States.

Although this official absolution of the accused governments will, it is to be hoped, heal the wounds caused by Mr. Bruce's attack, it does not close the incident. For, as the report points out, there are a good many questions connected with these metal shipments that require clarification. Where, for example, did the scrap metal purchased in Switzerland by British agents for shipment to this country originate? And would it not be possible to make fuller use of available scrap in western Europe, thereby reducing the drain on American supplies of scarce metals? The experts whom the ECA plans to send to Europe to study such problems may find answers to such questions that will save American taxpayers a good deal of money and at the same time further ECA efforts to make western Europe less dependent.

Cost Of Controls

I am neither landlord nor Republican. I rent a four-room apartment, which I have held since its completion in 1941. Since 1941 my pay has increased 130 per cent, while the rent has increased 15 per cent (a truly voluntary increase, since the owner made no effort to force leases).

This apartment is twice as large as I need, and I would prefer a smaller place. But a new apartment, of the smaller size I wish, would cost me substantially more than the large one I have. At current costs no builder can compete with rent-controlled properties for my market.

Why should we expect an investor to build rental units for which at current costs he must charge $85, when comparable units are held by law to $60, and so far as he can see are likely to remain so indefinitely? Merely leaving new construction uncontrolled solves no problem; the prospective builder knows that with the first breath of recession his high cost units will be the first to become vacant, as tenants crowd into cheaper controlled units, doubling as they always do when income falls.

Are we not deceiving ourselves that we shall not insist on rent control forever, as has France, if we do not break ourselves of this pleasant habit now? If we do not take controls off in good times, can you imagine us doing so in a depression?

Unless we want a "shortage" forever, or rental construction wholly left to the Government, we shall have to decontrol. We should start now by authorizing an immediate 15 per cent increase over 1945 ceilings, and a guaranteed additional 10 per cent each January hereafter.

Bishop Oxnam's Charges

Four letters leveled at Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam's address in the D.A.R. Hall, January 27, appeared in your issue February 2.

The letter signed "Cynic" speaks with a characteristic lofty finality on the issue raised by the bishop which "Cynic" terms "comparative triviality." The only issue raised by the bishop was the maintenance of separation of church and state against the avowed effort of the Roman Catholic Church. I submit that such is not a "comparative triviality" in the United States.

The letter signed by "Mrs. R. D. would have the bishop "cast the beam out of his own eye," the beam being "political power." By implication Mrs. R. D. concedes that such a beam is in the eye of the American "hierarchy" of the Catholic Church. Dr. Oxnam is the bishop of just a church, who seeks to maintain religious and political liberty through political channels, whereas the Catholic Church covets that liberty exclusively for itself, as it has done in all countries where it has gained sufficient power. I refer to Italy, Spain, Portugal and to the Latin American countries.

The letter signed by Mr. John D. Costa is quite frank, yet quite naive, as to the objectives of the Catholic Church. He admits that the church may have been guilty of Bishop Oxnam's accusations 300 years ago, but holds that it is now "a fine example of humanitarianism, tolerance, religion and equality." I respectfully refer Mr. Costa to the conditions existing in the countries where the Roman Catholic Church is all powerful.

The letter by Mr. Joseph E. Gedra assures "the bishop and others that they have nothing to fear from the Catholic church." It must be remembered that only his popes can thus speak for all his faithful; and two have anathematized the Bill of Rights. I feel, as does Bishop Oxnam, that there are millions of lay Roman Catholics who wish well to Protestants and others. However, I prefer to be guided by the excathereda utterances of the popes of the Catholic church when it comes to assurances of our liberties.

Commemorative Stamps

Commemorative stamps are issued to commemorate some historical event or honor some outstanding citizen, but in my travels about the country I find that there are only a very few postoffices that ever see the stamps, let alone have them on sale. I have been informed that the stamps are placed on sale in the city in which the commemorative event takes place and usually stamps are also sold in a few of the larger cities and then the balance of the stamps can only be purchased at the philatelic windows in Washington.

As the primary purpose of issuing the stamps is to give widespread publicity to the event that is being commemorated, wouldn't it make sense if these commemorative stamps were sent to all of the postoffices of the United States?

"Racial Ratios"

Your editorial, "Racial Ratios," of February 2, was a clever but superficial criticism of Senator Russell's Federal racial relocation bill. Although the Senator's proposal may not appeal, nevertheless, the idea of aiding Negroes to leave the South is probably the best and quickest way to solve America's racial problem.

Those who leave the South will be able to enjoy the benefits of the right to vote, better health and educational facilities, higher wages, an absence of miscegenation laws, less compulsory segregation, and many other advantages they are deprived of in the South.

As the number of Negroes leaving the South increases, the Southern whites will lose their fear (which doesn't exist in the North) of the possibility of Negro control of their State Legislatures. Thus, it will be easier for progressive thinking Southerners to pass laws extending greater rights and privileges to the colored people of the South.

Uncensored Pakistan

In the December 19 issue of your paper you published a round-up under the caption "Freedom of Press Has Lost Ground in Past Year" in which, under the subheading "Pakistan," it was stated "Dispatches leaving the country are censored regularly."

I do not know on what authority this statement was based. The government of Pakistan informs me that the statement is wholly unfounded as there is no press censorship in Pakistan.

Can ERP Succeed?

On February 8 the Administration will go before Congress to obtain European Recovery Program appropriations for the fiscal year 1950. It will then become more readily apparent than it is now that the prospects of success for the ERP by 1952 are indeed slim. The European Cooperation Administration will have to report in all truth that the long-range program considered by the organization of European Economic Cooperation in its recently published report offers little promise of being a real recovery program.

That report estimates that under the present program the participating countries will have a three billion dollar deficit in 1952. This means that without drastic changes in the present plans, western Europe will have to take a cut in 1952 of one-fourth of the planned level of imports from all sources. The report states, "Such a reduction in western Europe's imports would be an intolerable solution for both Europe and the overseas suppliers. Western Europe with a population one-tenth higher than before the war and imports one-fourth lower, could hardly prosper. For some countries the reduction in imports proposed would be even greater; for some they would mean misery."

The complete reduction of balance-of-payments deficits within the four-year framework would involve, on the part of some western states, the imposition of controls hithertofore known only under totalitarian regimes. Moreover, from the United States' point of view, such controls would mean the elimination of all luxury items from European trade and would only permit the purchase of selected raw materials and heavy industrial equipment from the North American continent. Since under the present program the United States faces a loss of a billion and a half dollars in her sales to Latin America and continued infringement by western Europe on her sales in other areas of the world, any further reduction of exports might occasion severe economic repercussions in the United States economy.

Any penetrating analysis on the part of the congressional committees concerned will involve the posing of questions which the officials of the ECA will find difficult to answer, to wit: assuming that the fiscal 1949 program did serve, and the fiscal 1950 program now under consideration will serve their functions as an integral part of a long-range program, is that program one which holds any promise of achieving a stable level of unsupported European economic activity?

If the answer to this question is negative, as it must be in view of the interim report of the OEEC, the committees should ask if there is any long-term program contemplated by the Administration that will achieve within some limits a viable European economy.

This is the time to make known to the Congress and the American public the situation with which they are confronted. The Marshall Plan as it now stands cannot be a European Recovery Program unless we are willing to accept the imposition of the most stringent economic controls in Europe, the reduction of European living standards, and serious dislocations in that part of the United States economy concerned with foreign markets.

Man And Machine

THE INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION: 1760-1830, by T. S. Ashton. (Oxford University Press, $2.)

THE FAILURE OF TECHNOLOGY, by Friedrich Georg Juenger; translated from the German by F. D. Wieck. (Henry Regnery Co., $2.75.)

I think it was the French writer, Jerome Adolphe Blanqui, who first employed the term, industrial revolution, to describe the tremendous alterations of the social and economic life of England that became manifest in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. The period of a round 70 years between the accession of George III and the death of George IV, assigned to the revolution by Professor Ashton, is, as he acknowledges, quite arbitrary; the various material, political and psychological circumstances which made it possible, had been some centuries in preparation; and certainly the cataclysmic forces set in motion by it are still far from exhausted. They may be said indeed to have produced the crisis which involves the whole earth, for without the transformation of society which followed the advent of the factory system and the introduction of power-driven machinery, neither Marxism nor Fascism would have been conceivable, nor would wars upon the scale of destruction familiar to our generation. It is also inconceivable that without industrial organization the great medical discoveries of the last century could have occurred or that the earth could support its present vast population. The question, then, is whether we are to consider the results of industrialism and technology generally beneficent or malign; and to this question these two books return precisely opposite answers.

Yet concerning the more obvious characteristics of the industrial revolution, Professor Ashton and Herr Juenger are apparently agreed; among them we may include the progressive divisions of labor, the movement of population from the rural areas to the great and ever-growing centers of manufacture and trade, the disappearance of the peasantry and the rise of the proletariat, the rapid advance of communications and the gradual annihilations of distance, the disfiguration of landscapes, the widening gulf of economic condition between social classes, the expansion of credits and markets, the rapid circulation of money and the mysterious phenomenon we call the business cycle. Capitalism, meaning the control of production through large accumulations of wealth and the employment of labor at fixed wages or rates, is much older than the factory system. Again, the great increase of population which in 1798 so alarmed the Rev. Thomas Malthus began at least a half century before the industrial age; and a corresponding increase, as Professor Ashton reminds us, occurred in Ireland where there was no industrial revolution at all. Like most British historians nowadays, Professor Ashton attributes the increase mainly to the rapid decline of the death rate, due, it seems, to immensely improved nutrition among all classes as the result of new crops, notably turnips, potatoes and various grasses. These made possible the winter feeding of cattle upon a much greater scale, thereby enlarging the supplies of meat and dairy foods.

At any rate, the rising population and the wholesale evictions and enclosures assured the early industrialists an abundant supply of cheap and docile labor. The horrors that accompanied the earlier phases of industrialism in England, the callous indifference of the Gadgrinds and Bounderbys to the physical and moral condition of their employes, the cynical exploitation of young children, the sweating of consumptive needleworkers, the barbaric poor-laws, and so on, have been often and eloquently described by English writers. Professor Ashton does not, of course, seek to deny or to extenuate them; but he assures us that in the long run the evils found their own remedies, and that the main tendency of industrialism has been toward more of everything good for everybody.

But this is precisely the view that Herr Juenger asserts to be fraud and illusion. His book was completed on the eve of the second World War; but the Nazis refused him permission to have it published, for he insists that totalitarianism is the teleological completion of an evolutionary process that begins with industrialism. Technology, Herr Juenger tells us, is of its nature destructive. It cannot be made to serve human purposes, but instead enslaves humanity to its own ends. Machinery does not save labor but multiplies it; to say otherwise is to ignore the elaborate technical organization necessary to the existence of every modern machine. Technology does not create wealth but destroys it; since it soon expands consumption to a point where replenishment is impossible. Thus it establishes not an economy of abundance but of exhaustion, and so far from ending poverty universalizes it. Thus through necessity of more and more elaborate organization it imposes a mechanistic pattern on the whole world and all life, obliging men to become machines themselves. It substitutes will and motion for wisdom and contemplation. If the technical organization of society has seemingly diminished plagues and epidemics, it has multiplied neuroses; for the characteristic frustration and panic of the twentieth century arise from the automatism of our lives and from the sense of our dependence upon organization. But the craving for security gives rise to demands for new forms of social insurance, thereby aggravating the evil and hastening the mobilization of society for total war, in which, says Herr Juenger, technology at last "drops its economic mask" and reveals its demoniac genius.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Stalin-Acheson Exchange

THE HARD core of the matter in the declaration by Premier Stalin and Secretary Acheson is whether there shall be a conference before there is an agreement on Germany or an agreement before there is a conference. Stalin would like to bring about a conference now—if possible with President Truman and certainly of the Foreign Ministers. Mr. Acheson, if I interpret him correctly, knows that no conference can succeed until through diplomatic channels an agreement has been reached among the three Western powers and with the Soviet government.

Lippmann

What Mr. Acheson rejected was the proposal to enter a public conference blindly. What he proposed instead was that the "normal channels" of diplomatic negotiations be used first to prepare the understandings without which a public conference can end only in still more violent disagreement. "All of the normal channels," he said, "are open," and this is as definite an invitation as any government, whose intentions are serious and sincere, could ask.

EVEN during the war, when Churchill, Roosevelt, and Stalin all had almost undisputed authority and were held together in the face of a common enemy, the unprepared face-to-face meetings had grave disadvantages. Under present conditions they would be hopeless, perhaps disastrous. Too much has happened: all the governments are now the prisoners of their own acts, declarations, and propaganda; the issues are frozen; their prestige is at stake. They are unable to negotiate publicly because the give-and-take of negotiation now means victory and defeat.

This state of affairs can be unfrozen only by careful, patient and quiet diplomatic intercourse, by the mediation of neutrals, and by events which reveal the mistakes that none is as yet prepared to acknowledge.

THE MAIN problem which has to be solved is indicated by Mr. Acheson's comment on Stalin's answer to the third question in the press interview. They are agreed that the blockade, the counter-blockade, the Berlin currency, the western German government are provisional measures on the way to "a meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers to consider the German problem as a whole." But there is no agreement as to what would happen when the Big Four met to consider Germany as a whole. In the American view there is no use meeting until we know what can be done at that meeting. For if we do not agree at that meeting, we shall be worse off than we are now: the Russians will want to restore the blockade; we shall feel we have to push on with our western German government. The partition of Germany, which is still provisional, will become much deeper.

Therefore, the crucial problem is to find through diplomatic channels something substantial and useful which a Council of Foreign Ministers could agree upon.

NOW at the present time or in the near future it is, I think, impossible for them to agree on a peace treaty for Germany. For that presents an insoluble question: what shall be the government for Germany as a whole? The Council of Foreign Ministers is bound to disagree about that. It is difficult enough for the three Western powers to agree about the German government. They can never accept the Soviet idea of a German government, nor will the Soviets accept the Western idea.

This means that the Council of Foreign Ministers is incapable of providing the German nation with a government that suits the four powers and also the Germans. Does it not follow that they ought to stop trying to do what they know they can never do? Never before in all history have the victors in a war thought it was their responsibility to provide the vanquished with a suitable government. That sort of thing has been done for weak and backward tribes. But to imagine that Russians, Britons, Frenchmen, and Americans can construct a government which 80 million Germans will regard as legitimate, and will support and preserve, is—if one looks at it coldly and clearly—preposterous.

THE FORMATION of a German government cannot be achieved by the occupying powers. It can almost certainly not be achieved while Germany is occupied. In all likelihood, if the experience of other nations is a guide, it cannot be achieved by the Germans except after a prolonged period of struggle and contention among themselves.

To recognize these truths, which no one can, I believe, seriously deny, may lead to some useful practical clues as to what should be attempted next. If there is to be another Council of Foreign Ministers, its purpose should not be to write the final peace treaty. its purpose should be to write a statute which will fix the relations of the victors to the Germans during the period of time when the Germans take over the responsibility of governing themselves and of creating a German government. For it will be only after the Germans themselves have created a government, which the victors are willing to recognize, that a peace treaty can be negotiated.

WE CANNOT, in other words, jump from the Potsdam system, which has broken down, straight over to a peace treaty. We must establish a new system to replace Potsdam. It would be an interim system, one in which the Allies continued to maintain garrisons in Germany and their ultimate controls, in which however they would liquidate military government and cease to occupy the whole territory of Germany. In the beginning, then, the internal authority over German affairs would pass to the various German state governments that now exist, severally and jointly, and, perhaps, as respects the maintenance of law and order to the German police, regulated by the new occupation statute, and under the command of a neutral chief of police.

ALL THIS would require prolonged diplomatic discussion. The cardinal point is that the objective of the diplomatic discussion would not be a peace treaty for Germany as a whole but a new regime of occupation and control, designed to last until a German government able to make a peace treaty has been created by the Germans.

Old Arlington Estate's Owner Fights Plan for New School

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

An Arlington woman's desire to keep her property just like it was when her great-grandfather settled in 1747 is blocking the Arlington School Board's desire to build a new school.

The school board, which has 145 students squeezed into the outmoded Hume School, has been considering locating a new school nearby in the exclusive, high-priced Arlington Ridge area of Arlington. So far, the most appealing site has been an eight-acre, wooded tract on S. 24th st. near Ode and Nash sts. Surveys are now nearing completion.

But Mrs. Frances Lee Sickles, who owns all but one acre of the proposed school site, takes exception to the whole idea.

Mrs. Sickles' great-grandfather, William Fraser, settled the area in 1747 and she doesn't want it disturbed.

Mrs. Sickles' daughter, Miss Mary Fraser, put it like this:

"We don't want to develop it—we want it kept as a public recreation area for everyone to enjoy."

William Fraser once owned the entire area surrounding the disputed school site. Family deeds to the property, now largely sold, go back to 1785.

Mrs. Sickles and her daughter now live in what was once the slave quarters on the Fraser estate which was known as Green Valley Manor. The manor house, a stone's throw from their present home, burned in 1924.

To keep the 24th st. site as it is, Miss Fraser says she and her mother have offered the Arlington School Board "everything we know to induce them to change their minds."

Their concrete counter-offer, proposed to the board last month, is this:

1. To sell the county acreage it needs to buld the school on the site presently occupied by the Shirley Homes development, land also owned by Mrs. Sickles. The price would be $3500 an acre. They feel the Government will vacate enough homes for the school if approached by Arlington.

2. To dedicate land to extend S. Rolfe st. from the Shirley Homes through to S. 23d st. to public use if the school proposal is accepted.

3. Give 50 feet of land on either side of Long Branch, a stream which parallels Army-Navy dr., to the county for a recreation area, and to throw in adjoining property on which an historic spring house stands just off the drive near S. 23d st.

As for the disputed 24th st. school site, it has long been used as a recreation area, Miss Fraser says, with the understanding visitors won't smoke, shoot, or chop down trees.

"On any fine day," she says, "it is usually full of children."

She and her mother maintain that the property would be "entirely unsuited" to a school site.

It is split by two ravines, one 15 feet deep, the other nearly 40 feet deep at one place, they point out.

Cost of filling and levelling these would be prohibitive, they feel.

The 24th st. property has its own history. After the Civil War, it is said its huge oaks were planted to keep malaria from jumping from the Potomac flats below, over the ridge to a nearby convalescent center for Union troops.

Matter of Fact

One Place To Turn

BELGRADE. — Abandonment of the Krenflin's imperialist program is not a feature of the Soviet "peace offensive," judging by the situation here in Belgrade. In fact while Generalissimo Stalin is all sweet reasonableness toward President Truman, he and his lieutenants are grimly intensifying their efforts to reconquer this rebellious and heretical former province of the Russian Empire.

The new economic union of the Soviet sphere just formed at Moscow will unquestionably be used to increase pressure on Yugoslavia, and if a political and strategic union of Russia and her satellites results from Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky's "health cure" at Karlovy Vary it will also be used in the same fashion. In fact, the Karlovy Vary meeting has almost certainly superseded a great rally of Cominform powers, a rally with no purpose except to plan Marshal Tito's destruction—which was originally scheduled in Bucharest in January.

The first question that therefore arises is whether Tito and his band of heretics can withstand the pressure that is being and will be used against them on the political plane. All observers here give answer in the affirmative, stating unanimously that all efforts of the M. V. D. have failed to produce any serious chism within Yugoslavia's united front.

LONG BEFORE his excommunication, Tito and his tough police chief, Aleksander Rankovic, had arrested the Kremlin's leading Yugoslav agents, Zujobic and Hebrang. Since the Cominform thundered its anathema there have been a few more arrests—recently a number of suspected officials of provincial governments have been rounded up, for instance, but the total of those arrested for disloyalty to Tito is only a few score, certainly not enough to constitute even a small purge by ordinary police state standards.

There is always the risk, of course, that Tito's bold career will be ended by a Kremlin agent's bullet. But the major threat to Yugoslavia's independence is really economic blockade. The Kremlin has organized a blockade of Yugoslavia with such thoroughness that Tito himself has called it the work of "enemies."

After the end of the war and suspension of UNRRA more than half of Yugoslav trade was with the eastern bloc. Even before his excommunication Tito was already asking great sacrifices of his people in order to complete his five-year plan. Now the eastern bloc has cut Yugoslavia off. Important deliveries of heavy machinery for the five-year plan which were to have been made this year will not now be forthcoming from Czechoslovakia, Poland and Russia. The program for reequipment of the Yugoslav army by Russia has been brusquely suspended at the 40 per cent mark. Yugoslavia's transport and other equipment is wearing out and no replacements are immediately in sight.

DESPITE THESE gigantic difficulties, Tito and his fellow leaders seem determined to continue their struggle to build up their country. Boris Kidric, forceful head of Yugoslavia's planning commission, has been desperately trying to cover the sudden gap in his program by every available means. He is picking up essential raw materials wherever he can, and "Anglo-Americans" are quietly permitting him to do so, as was shown when shiploads of petroleum were released to Yugoslavia at Trieste. He is also quickly negotiating extensive trade agreements with western European nations. And he is drawing down the gold reserve transferred to Tito's government by the State Department some months ago.

None the less, still greater sacrifices have had to be demanded from the Yugoslav people, and even all the people's sacrifices and all Kidric's efforts have not been enough. If Yugoslavia's resources can ever be properly exploited, copper, tin, antimony, bauxite and other important raw materials will make this a rich nation.

But for the present Tito and Kidric are in a grave economic dilemma which is made all the worse both by the proclamation of "popular communism" here and by Moscow's political pressure.

A SECOND QUESTION thus presents itself. Can Tito be forced to recant his heresy and make peace again with Stalin? The answer is that he cannot possibly do so, since he would certainly be burned at the nearest stake the moment he placed himself in the power of Stalin's M. V. D. Tito's only remote chance of making peace with Russia will come when Stalin dies. Then the struggle for supreme power in Moscow will offer him an opportunity to back one of the competing Kremlin factions and if his faction wins Tito may come out on top. But this in itself will involve a vast upheaval in the world Communist movement. And until Stalin dies Tito has only one place to look for needed aid—the West.

Caps Socked Again, Lose to Fort Wayne, 82 to 72

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

GEORGE MARSHALL, a civilian who owns a football team, a Hollywood wife, a chauffered car and a fierce ambition to become important has now acquired a naval aide. The guy is hustling.

POVICH

To fill a coaching vacancy on his Redskins, over the weekend Marshall labored and brought forth a rear admiral—John E. Whelchel, USN. The Redskins have no budget troubles you know, and can pay an admiral more than the United States Navy, which in this administration is fighting a losing war with the Appropriation Committees.

For Admiral Whelchel, the transition is not too extreme. He'll still be working for a Chief of Operations. Marshall is it. He's also paymaster, board of review, chairman of the officer demotions committee, and can pull his 51 per cent rank. It may not be exactly a stark return to civilian life for Whelchel.

Whelchel had a nice rank in the Navy, rear admiral. Not quite top-level, though. And he won't be quite top-level with the Redskins, either. Nobody outranks Marshall in that outfit.

Thanks to his Navy training, though, his job as a Redskin coach may not be so rugged for Whelchel. He must have had considerable training on the inter-com. Skipper Marshall will be talking to no green pea when he grabs those topside phones and yells to Whelchel to haul tight the ends, reef the tackles, set in them lee braces and trim the right half, the lubber.

The best coach the Redskins ever had, Ray Flatherty, was a terrible guy on the inter-ocm. He turned his deaf ear to Marshall's orders and was prone to leave the upstairs skipper talking into a vacuum. Flaherty's Redskins won four Eastern Division titles and two league championships but he was court-Marshalled.

During the last of those breathless weeks when the identity of the Redskins' new coach was still a secret, the signing of the man was advertised by the Redskins' office as "the greatest thing ever to happen to pro football." Just what staggering surprise Marshall had prepared was baffling the imagination. Winston Churchill, maybe, or at least Alonzo Stagg.

THIS WAS TO BE the fourth unveiling of a Redskin coach since Ray Flaherty. And then Marshall produced his man. John E. Whelchel, no less. Somehow the name did not register as a household word. "Who's he?" asked Redskin fans who could not be expected to remember the name of the skipper of the USS San Francisco or the Naval Academy coach of five years ago.

You'd have to say it was anti-climax, after the buildup during which the customers had been led to expect a Wagnerian thunderclap among coaching personalities. Even against the background of Washington's biggest sports-writing press conference and an impressive tangle of radio recording lines, Marshall couldn't strike a pose and say "I give you John E. Whelchel," and induce a wild whooping among Redskin fans, though he tried.

It was a fluff, public reaction-wise. Whelchel may be the greatest football coach in the land, but the fans never heard him mentioned in that category. He's just some guy out of the Navy to most of 'em.

THAT WAS A PRETTY good record Whelchel compiled at the Naval Academy in 1942-43 when his teams lost only 5 of 18 games and licked Army twice. The admiral was a good college coach. But he's been out of even the college coaching business for five years, and among the pros he'll be in a tougher league. Them pros, you might say, don't have no respect for rank and Whelchel will have to pull good football instead of his stripes.

He'll have that superior football genius, Marshall, to fill him in on the cute developments of pro football during the last five years, however. Apparently Marshall isn't giving Whelchel the job simply to forsake him in it. He'll give his new coach the full benefit of his guiding hand.

Somebody will have to bring Whelchel up to date. Curly Lambeau, who has been coaching the Packers for most of 25 years was asked recently how much the game has changed. "It's changed since last season, it changes every season," said Lambeau. "Even last year's plays are old-fashioned!" Whelchel was a gallant naval officer. Could be that the Navy's loss was, well, the Navy's loss.

Mangrum Wins With Record 263

By Murray Sinclair

Tucson, Ariz., Feb. 6 (AP).—So-called "pretty good" golf today won Lloyd Mangrum, Chicago, the $2000 first prize money in the $10,000 Tucson Open tournament.

It also enabled him to set a new course record of 263 for 72 holes. This was 17 under par.

The win also put the cool-shooting war veteran ahead of Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Calif., as the leading money winner to date in 1949.

Demaret, who had previously held the El Rio course record of 264, along with Skip Alexander of Southern Pines, N. C., finished in a tie for fifth place with Skee Riegel, the amateur from Tulsa, Okla. Alexander picked up after nine holes and struck out for El Paso, Tex.

Al Smith, Winston Salem, N. C., finished five strokes behind Mangrum with 268 for second prize money of $1400.

John Bulla, Pittsburgh, Pa., annexed $1000 for finishing in a third place tie at 269 with amateur Frank Stranahan, Toledo, Ohio. Stranahan got a silver trophy.

Lew Worsham of Washington, D. C., was alone in fourth place with a 270.

Mangrum's score today was two strokes off the all-time 72-hole PGA tournament record which is held by Ben Hogan.

Mangrum said it was the best tournament score he had ever racked up since hitting the tournament trail.

Mangrum started out the final 18 holes with a jinx over his head. In the five years the Tucson event has been played, no golfer had led from start to finish. Mangrum had been ahead this tim from the first round.

At the end of five holes he practically had first prize money on ice. Smith, who had trailed him at the start of the day's play, was sand-trapped on the fourth hole and forced to go two over par.

Riegel, tied with Smith, was in the clear for a short approach to the third green but bounced over beneath the trees and took a two over par six.

Mangrum missed birdies on the first four holes by putts that barely missed dropping. Then he began hitting the cup and made the turn into the back nine two uunder par.

Mangrum went over par on the twelfth but made up for it on the next hole when he sank a 25-foot putt for a birdie.

"That," he said, "was a beautiful a birdie two as I've seen in a long time.

"I played pretty good golf today. Yesterday I played a lousy game although I finished with a 68. Today was much better. I was pretty sure I had won when I started out on the last nine."

Mangrum's Luck Holds Out, He Wins a 1949 Car

Tucson, Ariz., Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Lloyd Mangrum, Niles, Ill., took a clean sweep of all first prizes today, when, in addition to the $2,000 top money in the $10,000 Tucson Open, he won a 1949 Plymouth sedan given away by the Tucson El Rio Country Club.

The drawing was held immediately following completion of the 72-hole tournament this afternoon. Mangrum, as winner of the tournament, was supposed to draw the ticket. His hand was too large to fit into the jar containing the tickets, so he selected at random a small boy from the crowd of onlookers.

The youth pulled out the ticket which carried Mangrum's name. Mangrum said he would give the car to his daughter.

Pistons Lead All the Way; 72 Personal Fouls Called

Special to The Washington Post

Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 6.—The lowly Fort Wayne Pistons snapped a five-game losing streak at the expense of the Eastern Division leading Washington Capitols here tonight.

The Piston's, the Western Division's fifth-place team, rang up an 82-72 victory to hand the sagging Caps their second straight loss by a 10-point margin. New York trimmed the visitors, 83-73, last night. The loss was the sixth in the last eight starts for the Caps.

The game was not especially rough, but the whistle-happy officials, Arnold Heft and Lou Eisen, set a BAA record for detecting personal fouls, calling 72. Forty-one were against the Caps, most of them in the last half when the Caps tried to force the Pistons out of their deliberate style of play.

Still Lead by 8½

The loss did not alter Washington's 8½-game lead over New York as the Knicks were trounced by the Chicago Stags in New York.

The Pistons were out scored from the field 23-22 but had a 38-26 edge at the free-throw line.

The Pistons led all the way holding period margins of 22-10, 34-25 and 55-47. The Caps closed up to 40-38 in the third period, but Fort Wayne spurted and regained control of the game.

The Pistons held margins of 61-49 and 76-62 at different times in the final frame, scoring easily as Washington pressed out of position in an attempt to get possession of the ball.

McKinney Gets 17

Bones McKinney led the Washington attack, collecting 17 points in the second, third and fourth periods before fouling out with about four minutes to go.. Charley Black, who got the Pistons started with 10 points in the first period, and Bruce Hale paced the Pistons. Hale had 15 and Black 14.

The Pistons lost Ward Williams on the third period and Jack Smiley in the fourth period via the personal foul route.

Sonnie Hertzberg, who scored 12, also fouled out in the fourth period.

Stags Wallop Knicks

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Chicago Stags won their ninth straight game from the New York Knickerbockers tonight, 87-75, as Max Zoslofsky scored 26 points. The contest drew 7457 fans at Madison Square Garden.

Although the final margin of victory was 12 points, the Knicks kept it close until the fourth quarter. The score was tied seven times and the Knicks twice held the lead.

The loss dropped New York to third in the eastern division behind Baltimore which was idle. Ray Lumpp, who converted 13 of 14 free throws, was high scorer for the Knicks with 23 points.

Conzelman Has Attack; Not Serious

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—James G. (Jimmy) Conzelman, former head coach of the Chicago Cardinals of the National Football League, suffered an attack tonight and had to leave the New York Baseball Writers' dinner.

"I don't think it's anything serious," Conzelman said later when reached in his room at the Waldorf Astoria. "I think I had a touch of ptomaine poisoning or something.

"The doctor is here with me and I should be okay in the morning."

Conzelman, whose resignation as coach of the Cardinals became effective January 12, was stricken during one of the skits featuring the writers' dinner.

He was removed to a private room and the program was interrupted while a call was made for a doctor.

Conzelman left his football post, he said, to devote more time to his advertising business in St. Louis.

He posted a 162, 140, 135, 153, 104—694, which, with his handicap of three pins, gave him high score. Second was Joe Francella, 681-9—690, and Johnny Stewart, 659-24—683, was third.

In a Mile o' Dimes benefit at the Ice Palace, Tom's Auto of the men's Major District League defeated Ice Palace, leading team in the men's Minor District League, 1881 to 1741. John Reesa's 416 for the winners was high. The event netted about $30 for the paralysis fund.

In another Mile o' Dimes benefit, Wilson Pontiac of the Bethesda Alleys defeated Wilson Pontiac of King Pin Alleys, 1728 to 1690. This event netted $50 for the fund, it was reported.

Wacky Basketball Season Proves Tough on Favorites

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Basketball is a dizzy game, anyway, so nothing should be surprising. Yet many a coach was holding his head today wondering what happened to his boys Saturday night.

Sure Kentucky, St. Louis, Illinois, Western Kentucky and San Francisco, among the Nation's elite, won. But try and figure out that narrow overtime triumph by St. Louis over Long Island U., 43-37, at St. Louis last night.

The Billikens, rated second to Kentucky's No. 1 Wildcats, whipped LIU easily in New York last January. Last night they had to go an extra period to win. LIU (14-10) threw up a zone defense which the Bills (15-1) found difficult to penetrate.

That was a close one for St. Louis but it was a victory.

There were at least 12 other games in which the favorites got conked on the head.

Minnesota was dumped by Ohio state, 48-39, and lowly Colorado A&M crowned Brigham Young in a Big Sixer, 62-54. Arkansas knocked Baylor out of the Southwest Conference lead with a 52-46 upset.

Other whacky finishes included Georgia Tech, 72, Tennessee, 71, and Gettysburgh, 61, Muhlenberg, 59. The lead changed hands 23 times in that last one.

Missouri 40, Kansas State 34, was another surprise as were these others: Western Maryland 61, American U. 59; Penn State, 63, Syracuse 47; Toledo 59, Canisius 46; North Carolina 64, Duke 34; Pennsylvania 45, Cornell 43; and Wooster 72, Akron 65.

Mighty Kentucky (17-1), with Alex Groza canning 30 points, whipped Bradley (19-4), 62-52. Groza's performance was magnificent but it was a 55-foot field goal by Cliff Baker which thrilled the crowd.

Illinois (14-2), moved back into first place in the Big Nine by downing Wisconsin, 61-54, while Minnesota (14-2) was losing. Lillinois was rated fourth and Minnesota fifth nationally last week.

Western Kentucky (17-2), No. 6 in the Nation, trounced Murray (Ky.) 61-47, and San Francisco (18-3), No. 10, blitzed City College of New York again, 48-32.

Villanova (13-3), which was unbeaten a week ago found the road very inhospitable. They were licked by Duquesne, Chicago Loyola, beat Baldwin Wallace, and then last night were thumped by Bowling Green, 57-46.

Villanova's losses left Hamline (15-0), the only major team in the country with an unbeaten record. The Pied Pipers, idle yesterday, play St. Thomas (Minn.) in a return tomorrow night.

Along with the changes in the Big Nine and Southwest Conference, there were new leaders today in the Ivy League and Big Six. Texas (14-2) whipped Texas A&M.

Minneapolis, Feb. 6 (AP).—J Rochester broke the Minneapolis Lakers' winning streak at 10 and stole into the Western Division lead by an 85 to 74 margin tonight before 9024 fans.

Arnie Risen, whose 21 points in the third quarter, set an all time BAA record for a single period, led the Rochester surge with a total of 22 points. Bob Davis got 21.

Held to two baskets in the first half, George Mikan finally burst loose for 32 for the Lakers. The game was marked by under-the-basket fisticuffs by Bob Wanzer of Rochester and Don Forman of Minneapolis. Both were ejected from the game.

Joe Blackwood Choice Over Vinci Tonight

Chet Vinci, former Marine, and Joe Blackwood, former Bostonian, tee off on each other tonight in the Turner's Arena weekly fight feature.

Vinci is the toughest foe Blackwood has been called on to meet here since the hard-hitting middleweight moved from Boston to Washington.

In his two previous Turner's appearances, Black ood disposed of Ken Stribling and stopped Al Wright in two rounds. He'll be the favorite tonight, but that doesn't bother Vinci who's scored the most notable victories of his rather successful career as an underdog.

If Vinci wins, he'll not only upset Blackwood, but Matchmaker Gabe Menendez as well. Menendez is counting on Blackwood to headline at least one of his Griffith Stadium productions this summer. If Blackwood loses tonight, Menendez will have to start from scrach again in his efforts to uncover a local fighter worthy of top billing at the ball park. Blackwood is the only one around today.

Vinci's record shows victories over Sonny Horne, Henry Chemel and Nick Kashaba and draws with Billy Killroy and Charlie Zivic, each a rugged foe.

Blackwood's manager is crafty Bill Daly, pilot of Lee Savold and Pat Comiskey.

The preliminary card is made up of three fives and a pair of fours. Perry Lowe, main-eventer from Camden, N. J. makes his local debut testing Walter Rowan, local welter; Kid Wolf, hooks up with Julian Keene, 19-year-old Washington lad; Don Wagner, unbeaten Portsmouth sailor trades punches with Ben Harrison, Washington, in a heavyweight fray—all five rounders. Fours pair Herman Johnson and Little Dynamite, lighties, and Emmet Harris with Bobby Suma in a welter scrap.

Saddler, Pep Fight Friday

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Featherweight Champion Sandy Saddler, who scored the fight upset of 1948 when he knocked out Willie Pep, will give the former titleholder another chance Friday night in Madison Square Garden.

The Garden's first fistic sellout in nearly three years is assured for the return, 15-round championship bout. The ringside and other better seats are all gone and only a few pews in the cheaper sections are left.

Saddler, a 16-5 long shot last October 29, manhandled and flattened the great Hartford, Conn., boxer in four rounds. It was the first time Pep ever had been stopped and only his second loss in 138 fights.

The championship fight tops a National program which includes such headliners as Welter King Ray Robinson, Heavy Contender Ezzard Charles, Lightweight Contender Jesse Flores, Middleweight Contender Bert Lytell, and Tommy Yarosz, Lee Sala, Johnny Kaufman and Don Lee.

Robinson, getting in shape for a possible title defense against either Kid Gavilan or Lightweight King Ike Williams, meets Gene Buffalo of Philadelphia, in a nontitle ten at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Thursday.

Swedish Track Star Cited Again

Boston, Feb. 6 (AP).—Lanky Erik Ahlden of Sweden, for the second time in two weeks today was voted the outstanding performer in a major track meet.

A jury of eight track writers gave him 34 points for his breath-taking 8:55.5 performance which gave him an eyelash win over Gaston Reiff in the Boston A. A. meet's Billings 2-mile feature Saturday night. Reiff was second with 24 points. Ahlden was previously voted the best in the Boston K. of C. meet a week ago.

Fans Will Honor Bob Feerick at Game on Feb. 19

Uline Arena basketball fans want to pay tribute to Capt. Bob Feerick of the Caps and Owner Mike Uline has set aside Saturday, February 19, as the occasion.

Feerick will be presented with gifts between halves of the Baltimore-Washington game, the last regularly scheduled game between the inter-city BAA rivals this season.

Feerick has been the mainstay of the Caps for the three years the local pros have been in the BAA. He is one of the two players in the circuit selected on the all-league team for two consecutive seasons. Bob is a product of Santa Clara.

Celtics Buy Bullets' Ezerski

Boston, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Boston Celtics of the Basketball Association of America tonight announced the acquisition of Johnny Ezerski of New York, a 6-foot-3 forward, from the Baltimore Bullets via the waiver route. Ezerski will play against the Bullets here tomorrow night.

The Celtics bid for Ezerski this season when he was waivered to Baltimore by the Providence Steamrollers.

Hoya Hockey Team Wins, 7-6

Baltimore, Feb. 6.—The Georgetown hockey team won its third game of the season here today, defeating the Baltimore All-Stars, 7-6. A goal by Gino DiGiralimo in the last minute and a half of play provided the winning margin. The Hoyas have lost two games.

U. S. Skaters Lose

Basel, Switzerland, Feb. 6 (AP).—Switzerland defeated the United States amateur hockey team here today, 5-2. The United States team beat the Swiss by 7-4 at Zurich Friday.

Riley, McWane Win Women's Golf

Hollywood, Fla., Feb. 6 (AP).—Polly Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., and Bea McWane of Birmingham, Ala., won the fourth annual women's international four-ball golf tournament today.

They swept to an easy five-and-four victory over Defending Champions Pat Devany of Grosse Isle, Mich., and Marjorie Lindsay of Decatur, Ill.

Riley and McWane equaled men's par for the 32 holes. The defeated team was five over regulation figures for the distance.

Long Island Golfer, 102, Gives Self Eight Years to Break 70

New York, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Nathaniel Vickers is going to smash his golf clubs to smithereens, if he doesn't break 70 by the time he's 110 years old.

That gives Vickers eight years to improve his game, for he is 102 now. He has been playing golf since he gave up tennis and cricket 50 years ago, but he's never been able to go 18 holes in fewer than 76 strokes.

All winter, the spry old gentleman has been practicing putting in the living room of his Long Island apartment, and he thinks maybe he's made a little progress.

"If I haven't I'll stick to painting," he declared.

Vickers never allows himself an idle moment, even though he's lived twice as long as a lot of people do. He takes long walks, paints in water colors, reads and putts from the time he opens his sparkling blue eyes at 8 o'clock every morning until he goes to bed at 11 to 12 at night.

"Retire? Never," he declared. "I'm really much too busy.

"I believe in moderation in everything and in never hurrying,' he said. "You'll die young, if you hurry, you know."

The doctor says Vickers is in better health than most men half his age. Only his hearing has failed, and he's really quite happy about that.

"For nearly 100 years I had to listen to people talk, and it got awfully boring," he said.

Trabert Beats Fred Kovaleski

Detroit, Feb. 6 (AP).—Second seeded Tony Trabert of Cincinnati upset favored Fred Kovaleski of Hamtramck, Mich., 6—3, 4—6, 9—7 here today in the finals of the first Michigan indoor tennis championship.

Kovaleski, a student at William and Mary College and seeded first, scored 18 service aces in the three sets and twice failed at match point as Trabert made use of brilliant play at the net to take the title.

Game Opens Busy Week For Colleges

Washington's busiest college basketball week of the season opens tonight with George Washington tangling with South Carolina at the Armory.

The week will be particularly trying for the Colonials. After the Southern Conference engagement with the Gamecocks tonight at the Armory, they wade into Duke Wednesday night in another Armory tilt and face North Carolina in one half of the Armory's Saturday twin bill.

These three Conference tilts will go a long way toward determining the Colonials' chances for a tournament berth.

Hoyas Play Penn, Seton Hall

Hoping to bounce back from its lacing at the hands of St. John's Saturday, Georgetown hits the road for a Wednesday brush against Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. The Hoyas return to the home court to oppose Seton Hall Saturday in the other half of the GW-North Carolina double-header.

Another topflight Wednesday engagement pits Loyola of Baltimore against Catholic in the Cards' gym with the frosh teams of the two schools meeting in the preliminary.

Friday's top billing goes to the Maryland-North Carolina game at College Park. The Terrapins, boasting a two-game winning streak, are busting their backs trying to salvage a conference tourney berth from a wretched season. Victories over VMI and W&L give them a 4-4 mark in league play.

Beaten by Navy Saturday, the G-W Colonials will have to be at their best to trim South Carolina tonight. Coach Frank Johnson's Gamecocks have lost only one of their six Southern Conference games, averaging more than 65 points in the half-dozen league brushes.

South Carolina completes its swing through the area the following night, meeting Maryland at College Park.

Nats Top List With 41

American League Has Record High of 199 Night Ball Games

By Ed Sainsbury

Chicago, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Led as usual by the Washington Nats, American League baseball teams will play an all-time high number of 199 night games this season, it was revealed today in the official schedule.

The Nats, who will play 41 of their 77 home games at night, will set an all-time league mark, although they are topped by the St. Louis Cardinals in the National League. The Cardinals have 43 after-supper contests scheduled.

A year ago there were 188 night games in the American League and for the 1949 season all clubs except the New York Yankees, Boston Red Sox and Detroit Tigers have increased their totals.

The 199 games constitute 32 per cent of the entire schedule, an astonishingly high figure when it is taken into consideration that 170 of the games on the schedule are Sunday and holiday fixtures. That leaves a total of 247 weekday afternoon contests.

Browns Play 19 Weekdays

The trend toward more and more night games is illustrated strikingly in a breakdown which reveals that four clubs, Cleveland, Washington, Philadelphia and St. Louis have scheduled more week night games than weekday games.

The Nats with their 41 night games left only 21 weekday afternoon dates whereas the St. Louis Browns, who play 36 games at night, have only 19 for weekdays. Cleveland's radio is 27 night and 25 day while the Philadelphia A's play 31 night and 19 day.

The strongholds of weekday baseball, Boston, New York, and Detroit, offer their patrons 44 afternoon contests apiece and each club has stuck with its traditional arrangement of 14 night games, two with each visiting team.

As usual, the Washington club opens the season a day in advance of the rest of the league with its official Presidential inaugural game, playing the Philadelph

Area Veterans Shun Perry Point Hospital

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Greater Washington veterans are shunning general medical and surgical facilities of the Veterans' Administration hospital at Perry Point, Md., it was disclosed there.

The reason given is that they don't want to be hospitalized for normal ailments at an institution which since World War I days has been a treatment center for the mentally ill.

The result hospital spokesmen said, is that the Perry Point General Hospital has been running at half-capacity since it opened 19 months ago.

In contrast, Mount Alto Veterans Hospital here has been filled for two years, and keeps a nominal waiting list of 30 patients.

"Even when we can convince eligible veterans they won't come in contact with neuropsychiatric patients there, they still refuse," a VA spokesman for the regional office here said. "They're afraid of what their relatives and friends might think."

The fact is that the Perry Point Hospital has been serving as a general medicine and surgery unit since July 1, 1947, in virtual isolation from mental care facilities there. Only its surgical suite is used for N. P. (neuropsychiatric) patients, and these are hospitalized after operation in separate buildings.

Hospital administrators blamed veterans' reluctance on the fact that little publicity has been given the new facility.

"If we could get the veterans and the public to accept the fact that a person need not be a mental case to be admitted here, we'd be better off all around," declared Walter Bruggeman, chaplain and assistant to the manager.

"It would help out, not only in filling our beds but in reducing the unfortunate stigma that is the lot of a mental health institution."

The general hospital, a four-story, 150-bed structure that once served as the infirmary and admissions center for the mentally ill, was converted to its present purpose under the VA policy of providing general hospital care on as wide a geographical basis as possible. Similar general hospitals have been set up in other VA special treatment centers throughout the country.

The GM&S building (general medicine and surgery) sits by itself on perhaps the most choice location of the 550-acre reservation where the Susquehanna River enters Chesapeake Bay. Across the broad Susquehanna is Havre de Grace, to the hospital's front is the bay, and landward are the buildings for the mental patients where about 1700 veterans are under psychiatric care.

Patients under general surgical care are allotted 75 beds on one floor, with private, semiprivate and ward facilities. The majority come for operations for hernia, hemorrhoids, and appendicitis, though all the ills requiring surgery may be treated there.

Others requiring hospitalization for general medical care are quartered on another floor, with an equal number of beds. Average hospital stay, since the hospital is not constituted to handle chronic cases, ranges between 14 and 20 days, officials said.

The Perry Point General Hospital has been surveyed and approved by inspection teams from the American College of Surgeons. It serves also as a teaching institution for resident physicians and surgeons preparing for their medical board.

The deans' committee, representing Johns Hopkins University and the University of Maryland schools of medicine, sets up the hospital procedures and supervises its medical and surgical services.

Commenting on the facilities, Dr. J. H. Shackleford, chief surgeon, declared:

"Veterans, and the public," he added, "should regard Perry Point as a place where all types of treatment are available, not just a mental health institution."

Blood in Brain Photographed

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

DEVICE DEMONSTRATED—The revolutionary new multimatic seriograph, which will permit for the first time a study of blood flowing through the brain, is demonstrated in the X-ray department, Bethesda Naval Medical Center, where it will go into use today. Posing as the patient, Robert Phelps, hospital man second class, rests his head on a compartment holding six cassettes containing high-speed, high-contrast photographic plates. James V. Wallace, hospital man chief, acts as operator. As an opaque solution, injected into a vein in the patient's head, circulates with the blood, X-rays from overhead equipment record its progress. The process requires 4½ seconds

Heart Association to Open Fund Drive Today

The Washington Heart Association will open its $75,000 Greater Washington Fund drive today with $7500 already contributed toward the goal.

The campaign is part of the American Heart Association's national drive for five million dollars. It will continue through February 28.

The money raised will be used to spread information on heart disease, expand the cardiac research program, and strengthen the seven heart clinics already in operation in the Washington area.

Follow-up treatment of clinic patients, development of foster homes for cardiac children, and establishment of summer camps for heart disease victims are among the association's plans.

Campaign headquarters will be in the Woodward Building, 15th and H sts. nw., and checks should be made out to the Washington Heart Association.

Heart fund booths will be set up in hotel lobbies, stores and theaters during the week.

General cochairmen are John H. Wilkins, jr., and William E. Leahy.

AMERICAN FAMILY CLOSE-UP
As they go, so goes the nation!

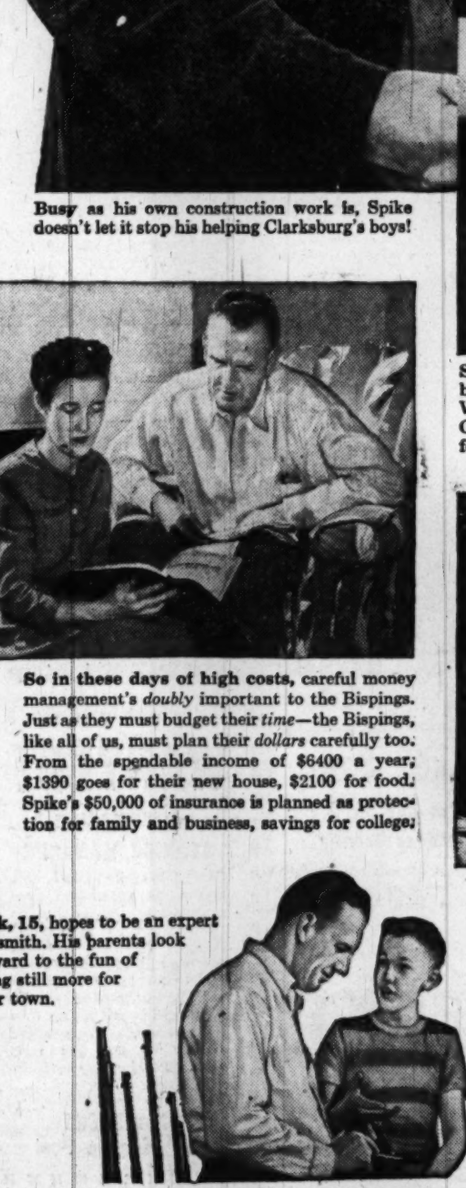
Developing good Scouts and good citizens is Frank H. Bisping's big interest.

"I make the time to build boys, too!"

Says Contractor "Spike" Bisping of Clarksburg, West Virginia

● With three children of their own to bring up, Spike and Myrtle Bisping wanted to help make Clarksburg a better place for all children to grow up in. But what could they go into that would bring out the best in youngsters, help to build the best citizens?

Was Scout work the answer? Spike had the work of a new construction business on his shoulders. How would he manage to make the time to "build boys," too . . . ?



Busy as his own construction work is, Spike doesn't let it stop his helping Clarksburg's boys!

Spike devoted his vacation last summer to taking 11 boys on an exciting canoe trip down the Cheat River. When his son Jack was 9, Spike helped with neighborhood Cub Pack. Now he's chairman of the troop committee for the District Scout Council. Jack's now a Star Scout.

It's a Scout-minded family! Myrtle Bisping is a Girl Scout leader and camp counsellor. Daughters Nichy, 14, and Babe, 10, pack "Clothes for Friendship" for children abroad . . . a troop project. National goal is to send 100,000 bundles!

So in these days of high costs, careful money management's doubly important to the Bispings. Just as they must budget their time—the Bispings, like all of us, must plan their dollars carefully too. From the spendable income of $6400 a year, $1390 goes for their new house, $2100 for food. Spike's $50,000 of insurance is planned as protection for family and business, savings for college,

Spike's family loves outdoor life as much as he does! Camping's their main source of inexpensive fun together. So other young folk can enjoy it too, Spike and fellow Scout officials plan a camp on waterfront land outside town.

Because he sparks projects like this, Builder Bisping has become everybody's friend in Clarksburg. "I'm well repaid for the time it takes," he says, "when I see better citizens growing up along with my own kids." How do the Bispings find the time? As Myrtle says, "Some things can wait—but children can't. Not if we're to keep this the kind of country we all want!"

Jack, 15, hopes to be an expert gunsmith. His parents look forward to the fun of doing still more for their town.

THE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES AND THEIR AGENTS

The Bispings, like other American families, prove to all of us that the only way we really solve our problems is by our own efforts!

These stories of real families much like yours also show how much more success, how much more happiness is possible when you have peace of mind . . . the sort of peace of mind that comes from wise management of money now, and from knowing that future security has been adequately provided for.

The Life Insurance Companies and their Agents bring you these American family close-ups because what this country amounts to depends upon what happens to its homes!

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

The Great Debate Starts This Week on Federal Reorganization

The great debate on Government reorganization will start this week as the first of the Hoover Commission recommendations will be made public officially.

What is generally regarded as the most important report to be made by the 12-man nonpartisan commission will cover Federal personnel. The personnel report is slated for release this week, although its major reform suggestions first appeared here in a series of articles six weeks ago.

That document would affect every single Federal agency, employe, and applicant for a Federal job. It cuts across agency lines. Its major objectives will be to attract and keep able people in the Government service; to reward the efficient; to deemphasize political support; to place people in jobs they are best fitted for, and to give agency heads more leeway in the selection, placement, and separation of their employes.

Storm warnings already have been hoisted by several top Civil Service Commission officials who regard the personnel recommendations as damaging to their prestige and authority. Actually, a persuasive argument can—and undoubtedly will—be made that the document could enhance the power and standing of the commission. Anyway, other agency officials take the same dim view of the Hoover Commission work—they are equally antagonistic to reports which would overhaul their pet bailiwicks.

It would be difficult to find a Federal official who would oppose Government reorganization as both unneeded and undesirable. But unfortunately, many of them have adopted the repeated view of Comptroller General Lindsay Warren, which is: Reorganize and shake up the other fellow, but you dare not put even a little finger on me.

Officials have compromised themselves by speaking out in opposition to prospective Hoover reports on their agencies before they even knew what was in them. The mere possibility that their agencies might be streamlined was enough for them to rally around in opposition. Many of the visits of officials to Capitol Hill these days is to enlist support of members of Congress to maintain the status quo of their agencies.

Nothing quite stirs up Government officials as the threat of agency reorganization. Agency heads have been made to feel that they are traitors unless they fight to maintain intact their organizations. To put it bluntly, reorganization of Federal agencies is fought like the plague. The common good in any plan is strictly secondary.

History plainly shows that Federal officials, in cooperation with Congress, have been most successful in blocking many of the plans proposed in the past 30 years to reorganize the agencies. The well-entrenched opponents of reorganization ignored Mr. Hoover when he was President; they cried "dictator" at Franklin D. Roosevelt, and now Harry S. Truman will have his troubles, too.

One top official, for example, estimates it will take at least two years to dispose of the Hoover Commission reports. Yet in principle, everyone loudly supports Government reorganization.

Basically, the score or more of reports which will be made by the Hoover group would give department heads far more administrative responsibility than they now have. For example:

They would be given power to recruit most of their own employes subject to standards of merit selection approved and enforced by the Civil Service Commission, a plan which has aroused Civil Service opposition.

They would keep their own administrative accounts such as payrolls, vouchers, etc., but subject to standards which would be laid down by the creation of a proposed new accountant general in the Treasury Department, a proposal which has the General Accounting Office up in arms, and,

They would purchase many of their own supplies except those items of common use to all departments, a suggestion which has met with the skepticism of officials of the Treasury's Bureau of Federal Supply.

SALARIES: The Hoover salary plans will come in for a long and hot debate. In general, it will be proposed that substantial pay raises be given to employes in the upper and high-level brackets; that the ceiling on classified salaries be lifted from $10,330 to $15,000.

But for most lower level and middle bracket employes such as clerks, postal employes, etc., it will recommend the creation of area wage boards to fix their salaries. The cost of living and salaries for similar work in private industry would be considered in the salary fixing of the great bulk of Government people.

In his minority report, James K. Pollock, a commission member, takes a swing at his colleagues for failing to suggest steps to make "downward adjustments" to bring some Federal salaries in reasonable conformity with community wage levels when the Federal salaries are found to be substantially higher.

The Hoover group also will recommend sweeping reforms in the efficiency rating, reduction in force, veterans preference, and examining systems among others.

It definitely won't recommend the firing of any fixed number of employes as has been reported.

Pentagon Is Expected To Pick D. C. Guard Chief

Application of Army Promotion Method Forecast in Naming Successor to Cox

The next commanding general of the District Guard is expected to be selected by the same promotion system now followed in the departments of the Army and Air Force.

This was learned last night as speculation continued over possible successors to the top District Guard post, now held by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox. Past retirement age, General Cox has indicated that he will leave the job in the near future.

In view of the reported Pentagon decision to consider candidates' assignment under the regular Army promotion process, informed sources insist that discussion of candidates for the job "is still a long way off."

From Eligibility List

Under the new promotion act, effective in December of 1947, a selection board, named by the Secretary of the Department of Army or Air Force, picks officers to fill vacancies from an eligibility list. The board is authorized to make its choice on the basis of performance, not just seniority, as in the past.

The National Guard is not required to follow this selection board procedure under the act. However, the National Guard Bureau in the Pentagon has decided to give the system a "test run" in the selection of nominees for the expected District Guard vacancy.

It was pointed out that the promotion procedure of the regular armed services could be adopted only in a Federal jurisdiction, such as Washington, since National Guard officers in the States are named by the Governor.

Question Comes to Head

The question of the District Guard vacancy came to a head 10 days ago when President Truman's executive order—transferring the administrative control of the local unit from the White House to the Military Establishment—also directed Defense Secretary Forrestal to submit recommendations for appointing a commanding general.

In the list of likely candidates for District Guard post—and it grows daily—are Col. LeRoy S. Mann, commander of the 260th Coast Artillery group and senior line officer of the local guard; Col. W. H. Abendroth, member of the general staff committee on National Guard policy and former adjutant general of the Idaho National Guard, and Col. Charles M. Myers, senior Regular Army instructor for District Guard units.

Langer Urges End of School Segregation

Elimination of segregated schools was urged yesterday by Senator Langer (R., N. Dak.), in an interview over Station WOOK.

Langer approved the "legal attack" of minority groups on the present dual school system as "the most effective way of equalization of educational opportunities."

Langer appeared on the "Americans All" program, directed by Dr. Tomlinson Todd. The interview was part of a special program observing the 150th broadcast of "Americans All."

The Senator said he thought the prospects of District suffrage were "not so good" with the absence of Senator Capper (R., Kans.). He added, however, he felt suffrage would eliminate "some of the inequities in our National Capital."

He also urged passage of Federal antilynching, anti-poll-tax and fair employment practice legislation."

MANTRAP—Master Clayton Robert Davis, 2½, of 3162 Buena Vista ter. se., shows his dad, Coast Guard Lieut. Roderick C. Davis, and brother, Roderick, jr., 5, how dangerous a pipe can be. While on a Sunday jaunt near his home, Bobby chanced upon an open 4-inch cast iron pipe that encases a gas main shut-off. Into the open pipe popped the left foot, right up to the knee—and there it stayed an hour. His cries of alarm brought his parents, neighbors and the Fire Department Rescue Squad which dug a hole around the pipe, chisled it off just below the boy's foot, and removed his boot. With Shotgun

Blacksmith Kills Himself On 5th Try

After writing a note describing four unsuccessful efforts to commit suicide, a 43-year-old Branchville, Md., blacksmith succeeded on the fifth try yesterday by blowing the top of his head off with a shotgun.

Burndeen Joseph Harmon, 9006 Baltimore blvd., was found dead in the dining room of his home around 3:30 p. m., only a few minutes after he had telephoned his sister and apparently fired the fatal shot as she stood with the telephone receiver to her ear.

Police found a 12-gauge shotgun beside the body. On a near-by table was a note in which the dead man told of trying to end his life by use of two separate kinds of poison, illuminating gas, and by hanging. In support of his written statement, police found two partially filled bottles of poison in the kitchen along with an Army-type luggage belt with which the distraught blacksmith apparently had tried to hang himself.

Maryland State Trooper E. E. Hudgins and Prince Georges County Detective Richard A. Pearson, said Harmon apparently had procured the shotgun after the earlier efforts failed and then telephoned his sister, Mrs. Bertie Evers, 6701 Edmonston rd., Riverdale, to inform her of his intentions.

Mrs. Evers said she told her brother, "You haven't the nerve to shoot yourself or anyone else." A few seconds later she told officers she heard the report of the gun.

The body was found a few minutes later by a nephew of the dead man, Carroll Pate, as Mrs. Evers was trying frantically to telephone her brother's home. Pate, who lives at Mrs. Ever's home, said he had stopped in for a visit with Harmon while out for a Sunday drive.

After talking to members of Harmon's family the officers attributed his actions to marital difficulties. They said he had been separated since last December from his wife, Mrs. Dessie M. Harmon, who now lives at 1708 Lyman pl. ne.

A certificate of suicide was issued by Dr. J. T. Maloney, Prince Georges County medical examiner.

Mrs. Truman to Cut Ribbon Opening Affairs Center

The Washington World Affairs Center at 1712 H st. nw. will mark its official opening at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday when Mrs. Harry S. Truman, wife of the President, cuts a ribbon admitting several hundred invited guests.

The organization describes itself as a nonpolitical and nonprofit community service center organized for information, study and discussion of international affairs.

Opening of the center also will mark opening of the first Washington exhibit of arts and crafts from European displaced persons camps. More than 2000 items make up the collection.

Policeman Destroyed Film, New York Photographer Says

A New York photographer reported to police yesterday that a Second Precinct station policeman manhandled him and destroyed a roll of film representing two days' work.

Joe Covello, 27, employed by the Black Star Publishing Co. in New York, said the incident occurred yesterday at 7th and P sts. nw., where Covello was getting material on Negro life here for an article for Ebony Magazine.

Covello told a Washington Post reporter he was focusing for a candid street-scene shot which would have included the policeman when the policeman came charging over and grabbed him.

"He shook me up, then grabbed for the camera. After we struggled for it a few seconds, the officer said 'I'm gonna smash that camera up against a telephone pole.' He let go when I offered to give him the film," Covello said. When the film was turned over, the policeman promptly unraveled it and walked off.

Covello said he had not spoken to the policeman nor offered any provocation before the incident.

At the Second Precinct station where Covello reported the alleged manhandling, Lieut. Joseph H. Hunt declined to give further details of the case pending a meeting of all parties with Precinct Capt. Clyde M. Strange this morning at 9 o'clock.

Covello's story was concurred in by Allan Morrison, an associate editor of Ebony Magazine working out of New York who accompanied the photographer on the assignment. Both are staying at the Charles Hotel, 1338 R st. nw.

The two had been here since Saturday and Covello said the roll of film which he had been forced to surrender contained 11 exposures, some of which necessitated prearranged appointments with the subjects. Others were candid and cannot be replaced.

To make sure he was not violating any Washington ordinances, Covello said he had checked earlier with a Second Precinct station clerk and had been told that it was permissible to take candid street shots.

Covello could offer no explanation of the policeman's conduct.

TV Sets at Georgetown U. Hospital Called Boon to Patients—And Visitors, Too

Therapeutic Value Seen in Programs; Help Sick Recover

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Television sets, available to Georgetown University Hospital patients at $3 a day or $15 a week, are a boon not only to the sick, but also to the doctors, nurses and vistors.

"The patients that have sets in their room sure get good care!" a resident in medicine remarked facetiously yesterday. "Doctors and nurses are always at their elbow!"

"Seriously, though," he added, "the programs do have a therapeutic value, making patients more anxious to get well since they bring the outside world into their rooms."

Sister Mary Antonella, hospital superintendent, said the video sets are "wonderful recreation" and the three sets available for rent from a television dealer are "always out."

A floor supervisor said visitors sometimes stay too long when they become interested in sports events. They want to stay to see how it comes out, the supervisor said.

One doctor said he had had to write orders not to allow more than one hour of television viewing for one or two of the patients with heart trouble. These patients, he said, were getting too excited over the games.

"It's something to look forward to during the day," said Mrs. Amory Lawrence of Warrenton, Va., who has undergone an operation for a foot crushed by a horse.

By Parry Goodwin—The Washington Post

Mrs. Amory Lawrence of Warrenton, Va., a patient in Georgetown Hospital, finds this television set a welcome companion during the long hours. Several sets are available for use of the patients in their rooms at the hospital

She said she had had "lessons" in golf, skiing and tennis over the set as she lay in bed.

"I even had a lesson in astronomy the other day," she added. "I'm sure I wouldn't have learned about astronomy any other way!"

Master antennas are located on the roof of the hospital and the sets can be plugged into outlets in any room.

The greatest fun the hospital staff has received from the sets was one day when all three of them were in the children's ward. They were all turned on at once for the benefit of four polio patients.

"What bedlam!" said a nurse as she described the scene. "It was wonderful."

2 Detectives Arrest Pair After Battle

2 Suspects Charged With Grand Larceny And Housebreaking After Spirited Fight

Two men were under housebreaking and grand larceny charges yesterday, after a slam-bang fight that landed them and two policeman in Emergency Hospital late Saturday night.

James Winfield, 27, of 520 Ricketts Court, nw., and Harvey Lee Robinson, 24, of 2110 E st., nw., were arrested at 9 p. m. Saturday as, police said, they were making off with canned goods valued at $86 from a Safeway store at 810 20th st. nw.

Two detective sergeants from the general assignment squad, both off duty, F. L. Graver and G. W. Chapman, made the arrests.

Before the men were finally arrested, a fight between them and the detectives broke out, Robinson escaped for an hour, four scout cars and two cruisers got into the act, and all four principals were treated at Emergency Hospital for injured hands, barked shins, sprained ankles and bruises.

At police headquarters later, the two confessed to the housebreaking, police said, and both were charged.

It all started as Gaver and Chapman were walking near the Safeway store enroute to talk to a man who they thought might give them information about Third Precinct housebreakings.

As they passed the store, they saw two men loading cases of canned goods into a push cart.

Winfield started the fight, police said, and when hte detective holding Robinson went to help, Robinson escaped. Detective Sergt. Chapman thought he recognized Robinson, and proceeded with others to Robinson's E st. address.

Police entered the home and found Robinson on the second floor. Police said he jumped from the window to a shed and rolled into the arms of other police outside.

Police said they were investigating possible connection of the two with other Third Precinct burglaries.

Second Man Arrested In $5600 Safe Theft

Police arrested and charged a second man yesterday in the safe theft from the Lily Ponds housing project Thursday night. The 600 pound safe with an estimated $5600 inside is still missing.

Arrested yesterday and charged with housebreaking was a man identified by police as Randolph J. Glover, 23, a laborer who lives at 412 2d st. nw. Safe Squad Detective Sergts. Irving Lubore and W. W. Friel who made the arrest said Glover denied any part in the theft.

First break in the case came Friday when police arrested and charged with housebreaking an 18-year-old watchmaker, who, they said, has admitted taking part in the theft. The police picked up the youth, James R. Wear, of 4551 Shaw dr. ne., after learning that Wear had tried unsuccessfully to borrow an acetylene torch from an auto repair shop near the housing project just before the theft occurred.

The safe was reported stolen from the housing project's office, 4500 Quarles st. ne., where it was set in concrete.

Citizens' Group Assails Report On Segregation

Federation Says 'Absolutely Untrue' And 'Distorted' Picture Presented

The Federation of Citizens' Associations issued a formal report yesterday denouncing the National Committee on Segregation for its approach to racial problems here and its recommendations.

In a report issued by the executive committee and authorized by the federation as a whole, the 91-page segregation study published last December was scored for its "absolutely untrue" and "utterly distorted" picture of Negro conditions here.

The segregation committee's proposed solutions, drawn from "inaccurate" and "contradictory" statements, the federation declared, would lead to "chaos," would "further inflame both races and add fuel to the fires of racial misunderstandings."

The federation report, first of three to be issued on various sections of the segregation study, was prepared by a special committee composed of Harry N. Stull, chairman; Clifford H. Newell, Leverett A. Meadows, J. B. Dickman, jr., and Charles A. King.

The report notes initially that the National Committee on Segregation is a self-appointed group of 91 persons, "the large majority of whom live in remote parts of the country." Kenesaw M. Landis, "a resident of the City of Chicago," wrote the text of the "elaborate booklet," the federation group points out.

"Instead of confining themselves to a dignified approach to the problem and its solution," the Federation charges, "its authors have excoriated individuals and organizations that may desire to improve the position of the Negro in the Nation's Capital but who will lose enthusiasm for it after reading the document."

Organizations referred to apparently include the Board of Trade, the Washington Real Estate Board, the George Washington University, the District Medical Society, Federation of Citizens' Associations and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which the segregation study criticized.

Declaring that "our hope has always been to obtain a better understanding between the races," the federation group "definitely" disagrees with the contention of the Committee on Segregation that relations between the races here are worse than they were some years ago.

As for the solutions proposed in the segregation report—described as "a dangerous overnight repeal of all segregation laws and the enactment of legislation which would compel persons to do things that they are not willing to do voluntarily"—the federation had this to say:

"Never in the history of the world has bigotry, intolerance or racial feeling been successfully eliminated by legislation or administrative fiat. The solution of the problem will come by cooperation to overcome racial tensions and by a mutual understanding on the part of intelligent persons of both races who are willing to sit down and discuss the situation and the ways and means of improving it."

A fair employment practices act and elimination of segregation in the public schools would accomplish nothing but would lead to chaos, the Federation stated.

"In a spirit of accuracy," concludes the federation's report, "the report should have called attention to the fact that there are building, loan and insurance companies, banks, theaters, stores, taxi companies and other businesses owned and operated by and for Negroes. . . But anything favorable could not be fitted into the pattern of propaganda which the document presents."

Declaring that all the facts on Negro housing should have been presented by the Committee on Segregation, the Federation group also asserted that a greater proportion of Negroes own homes here than in any other city in the United States.

Principles in Free-for-All

By D. C. Fireman

Baby Saved From His Burning Crib

A 2-year-old boy was rescued from his burning crib by a fireman last night as flames swept the home of Donald T. Banks, 3768 Foote pl. ne.

Pvt. J. L. Nelson of Engine Company No. 27, Minnesota ave. and Hunt pl. ne., dashed up a flame-and-smoke-filled stairway to the second floor, rear bedroom where little Donald Banks, jr., lay unconscious in his crib as his mother screamed downstairs for some one to rescue him.

Nelson, who lives at 763 19th st. ne., picked up the child and carried him safely downstairs and outside, where Fire Rescue Squad No. 1 revived him after 15 minutes of artificial respiration. The boy was taken to Gallinger Hospital, and later released as suffering no ill effects.

A moment before Nelson's fire company arrived, a 15-year-old neighbor, Earl Richards, 3764 Foote pl. ne., attempted to rescue young Donald by climbing to the second-floor front roof and kicking in a window, only to be blocked by flames. Donald's father, a plate maker at the Government Printing Office, credited Nelson with saving the baby's life. Donald is the youngest of four Banks children, oldest of whom is 8.

Firemen said they were investigating reports the fire was started by children playing with matches. Banks and his wife got the three older children safely outside.

Home Rule Bill Given Priority By McGrath

Home rule for Washington is "the most important business before our committee this year," Senator McGrath (D., R. I.), chairman of the Senate District Committee, said yesterday.

Just back from a post-inaugural Florida vacation, Washington's "mayor" and chairman of the Democratic National Committee, added:

"I am most gratified and pleased with the exceptional interest many residents are showing in the local suffrage drive. And reports of the progress home rule advocates downtown have made in drafting a new self-rule bill for our committee is very encouraging, too."

Referring to the revised draft of a home rule measure, being prepared at his request by the District Democratic Central Committee with the help of the Washington Home Rule Committee, McGrath commented:

"It strikes me that we will have the best chances in Congress this year, if we present the simplest home rule bill possible."

Ben Sigal of the Democratic Central Committee and Alexander Hawes of the Washington Home Rule Committee plan to meet today to put the finishing touches on the measure. It is scheduled to be delivered to McGrath early this week.

With the chairman's return, the Senate District Committee will meet Tuesday at 11 a. m.

Area News in Brief

'Operation Safety' Expansion Planned

"Operation Safety," a traffic education campaign begun in the District last year, will be expanded to include all of Greater Washington, according to plans outlined by area trade association leaders yesterday.

Col. Alvin B. Barber, chairman of the Washington Board of Trade's traffic committee, said the decision had been reached at a recent meeting at which Maryland and Virginia trade officials had pledged cooperation. According to the plans, "Operation Safety" will be adopted as a community-sponsored program in each of the suburban areas.

"Operation Safety" is a month-by-month campaign designed to reduce the area's traffic toll by emphasizing seasonal hazards. This month's campaign slogan is "Drive slow in rain, sleet and snow."

Bartelt to Aid Drive

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Edward F. Bartelt will serve as national and District chairman for Federal employes participation in the American Cancer Society's fund drive in April, it was announced yesterday. It will be the third year Bartelt has served in this capacity.

Bartelt will be assisted by Leigh E. Ore, the society's national representative here, and the vice chairman will be Wallace E. Barker, jr., administrative assistant to the Treasury Commissioner of Accounts.

Last year Federal employes contributed approximately $400,000 to the cancer fund campaign, more than $100,000 in the District alone.

Opens Door to Police

Luther Johnson, 26, of 446 R st. nw., was arrested in a 7th st. store early yesterday morning, after he himself opened the door to admit two policemen.

Johnson had entered the store through a skylight in the roof, police said.

He was seen through a window crouching behind a cash register by Police Pvts. C. H. Harmon and W. L. Van Nuys of the Thirteenth Precinct, and as the two policemen were about to kick down the door, Johnson opened it, police said.

He was charged with housebreaking.

Nursery School Manual

A 100-page manual entitled "Our Cooperative Nursery School", written by five Silver Spring mothers over a period of two and a half years, and chronicling experience gained in operation of the Silver Spring Nursery School, will be published Thursday.

More than 350 of the 1000 copies already have been ordered, following success of a smaller pamphlet published in 1942. The authors are Helen M. Jones, Ruth K. Holstein, Margaret E. Nolte, Elizabeth K. Wright and Glenore F. Horne.

Widow Tells Of Lynching

The widow of a Georgia lynching victim here last night urged enactment of the civil rights program, especially a Federal anti-lynching law, "so that no one else will have to go through what I've been through."

A crowd estimated at 2000 crammed into All Souls' Church (Unitarian) to hear Mrs. Amy Mallard tell of the lynching of her husband and then make an impassioned appeal for civil rights legislation.

In a tired, halting voice, the Lyons (Ga.) school teacher related that last November a mob of hooded and robed men stopped the Mallards' car and shot her husband to death.

Sponsored by the Washington Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Mrs. Mallard's speech was the first in a series that will take her, under national NAACP auspices over most of the country, except the South.

Money Bills Top Assembly Working List

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 6 (AP). Money, divorce, poultry, segregation—most of all money—are among the leading subjects on the work list of the Maryland General Assembly, which begins the second month of its three-month session Monday night.

While the Legislature was in recess over the weekend, a survey of pending bills showed that the question of how much Marylanders should pay for the cost of Government will occupy much of next week's committee and floor time.

Governor Lane disposed of one money matter Friday by signing into law an act freezing the State tax on earned income at two per cent.

Meanwhile, Senator Edward D. Storm (D., Frederick) was offering a bill to amend the State constitution to state clearly that graduated income taxes would be legal.

Graduated Tax Rates

The bill would specifically permit higher rates for those in the upper income brackets and lower ones for Marylanders with smaller incomes.

At present, there is a flat two per cent tax on earned income and a five per cent rate on all net investment income.

If passed by the Legislature, Storm's proposal would be submitted to a referendum in the 1950 general election.

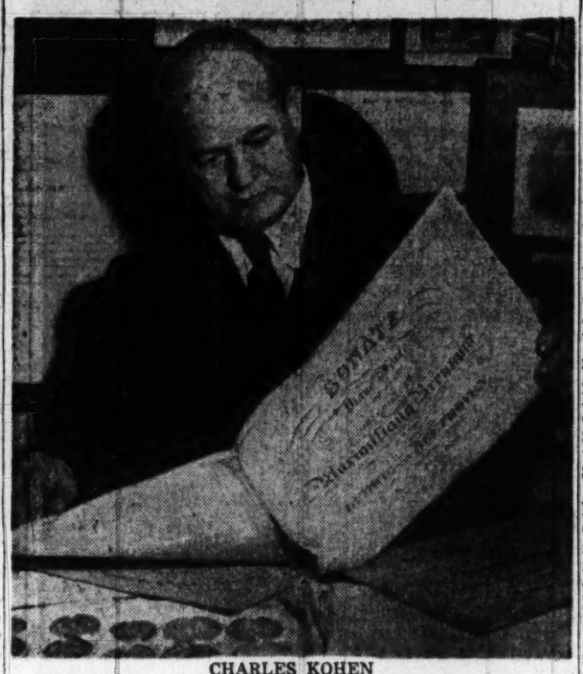
Chairman L. Harold Sothoron (D., Prince Georges) of the Senate finance committee, said his group will buckle down to work Tuesday on Governor Lane's record $130,800,000 budget for the 12 months starting July.

Delegate E. Peter Richardson (D., Worcester) introduced a Poultry Commission measure Friday "to protect Maryland's largest agricultural industry." Under the bill, a three-man commission would investigate and license commercial buyers and sellers of poultry.

Delegate William H. McGrath (D., Prince Georges) offered a measure to allow a partial divorce decree to be changed to one of absolute divorce after the parties have been separated at least 18 months.

His bill to make conviction of a felony ground for absolute divorce has led to the sharpest House debates of the session.

Not All Customers Ring True To Veteran D. C. Coin Dealer



CHARLES KOHEN

Coin Expert Examines Items He Collected on Recent Trip to Europe

By Judith R. Spivak
Post Reporter

Ask him why he likes his work and 61-year-old Charles Kohen, whose business is buying and selling history-laden coins, stamps and autographs, has a simple answer.

"It's fascinating," he says.

Donor of the Calvin Coolidge papers to the Library of Congress, Kohen has been in the business here 30 years and has numbered among his customers the late Henry Ford, a coin collector, and Franklin Delano Roosevelt, an ardent stamp collector.

He is known to thousands of Washingtonians who have met him as he leans across the cluttered counter of his tiny shop at 716 17th st. nw.

He also is known to banks settling estates, to police and to post-office officials whom he has aided in evaluting rare—and sometimes fake—stamp and coin collections.

Meets Both Kinds

"I've met some of the most honest people you can imagine," he says of his experience. He adds, however: "I've also met a lot of crooks."

Take the man who sent an "original" of a rare Thomas Jefferson letter through the mails, then claimed $500 from the post-office when it arrived at its destination torn and crumpled, with a smashed frame.

Kohen says one look told him it was a photostatic copy of the original, and, he concludes, the postoffice paid the claimant $1.25 for the broken glass and frame.

On the other hand, there was the 85-year-old man who turned up with a collection of Lincoln and Washington letters which he announced he would sell for $300—"take it or leave it."

Kohen says it was all he could do to get a word in edgewise and explain to the stubborn old gentleman that the letters were worth at least $10,000.

Ford One of Shrewdest

Ford was "one of the shrewdest buyers I ever met," Kohen says.

"He wanted a $50 gold slug from California. I wrote him the price was $250, and I still have the letter from him saying he couldn't afford it," Kohen recalls. "Can you imagine?"

One of the richest men in the world, Ford gave him $200 for it, and today it is worth $600, Kohen declares.

Kohen, who started out as a gold-leaf gilder in the antique business, has been collecting "everything" since he was a kid.

Jobless after World War I service, he dug out his three-volume boyhood stamp collection, sold it for $800, which launched himself on his present career.

Collecting is a hobby onyone can afford, Kohen says, and with United States stamps, its the safest investment I know."

A collection can be started for as little as 50 cents a stamp packet, he points out although you can pay up to 1000 for a Liberty penny—if it's 1793 mint-stage—or $3500 for a 24-cent "airplane stamp"—if it's one of 100 carmine rose-and-blue printed by mistake with an upside-down plane in the center.

Prices in the autograph field run higher, with a bread and butter letter from a well-known musician to his hostess averaging perhaps $35. A letter from Lincoln on affairs of state might well cost $400, Kohen says.

And if you can find a letter from Button Guinet, Colonial Governor of Georgia and a signer of the Declaration of Independence, most of whose papers were destroyed by fire, you'll probably find it's worth $50,000, he says.

Mason Rites Set Tuesday At Fort Myer

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. Tuesday in Fort Myer Chapel for Joseph Conway Mason, 81, insurance broker, former newspaperman and Spanish-American War veteran, who died Friday at Walter Reed Hospital. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

W. T. Robey's Rites Tuesday; Philatelist

Funeral services for William T. Robey, 57, stamp collector who made philatelic history when he discovered the 24-cent 1918 United States air mail stamps with inverted centers, will be held at his home, 9503 Wire ave., Silver Spring, Md., at 10 a. m. Tuesday. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Robey, who died Saturday at George Washington University Hospital, was an accountant and auditor for the Chemical Warfare Service.

His philatelic discovery occurred May 14, 1918, when he was in the employ of W. B. Hibbs & Co., stockbrokers.

Acted on Hunch

The night before the stamps, the first official air post stamp of the United States, were placed on sale Mr. Robey told his wife, the former Caroline A. Scott of Washington, that he had a hunch a mistake might be made in the printing of the bicolored stamps.

The following day he made three trips to a branch postoffice buying some of the stamps each time and examining the sheets as they arrived. On the third trip he found a sheet with the blue biplane in flight inverted within the red border of the stamps.

Handing over the price of the sheet, $24, Mr. Robey asked if the clerk had any more with inverted centers. The surprised clerk took one look, closed his window and telephoned the Bureau of Engraving, which promptly suspended sale of the air mail stamps temporarily.

Block Now Worth $75,000

Mr. Robey sold the sheet for $15,000 to a Philadelphian, who in turn sold it to Col. E. H. R. Green, New York and Texas collector, for $20,000. Subsequently the sheet was broken up, and a perfect center line block is said now to be worth $75,000 or more.

Mr. Robey entered the employ of the Government about 1935, and went with the Chemical Warfare Service at the outbreak of World War II.

He was a regent of Washington Chapter, Royal Arcanum, and a member of the Pentagon Philatelic Club.

Besides his wife, he leaves a daughter, Mrs. Louise A. Birch, and a granddaughter, Carolyn A. Birch, both of Washington.

Merci Train Visitors are Welcomed at Reception

By Marie McNair

Andre Picard, the man who conceived the idea of the French "thank-you" train, is a graying heavy set man with not one word of English at his command.

Mme. Marie Geoffroy, Chef de Cabinet of the Ministry of Veterans, is a tall handsome woman, youngish, and keenly perceptive. And the Countess de Fels whose Paris salon ranked among the big four, with writers, artists and musicians, leetures and writes herself, has been in this country before and lectured in Washington last year. She's the guest during her brief stay now, of the former Attorney General and Mrs. Francis Biddle.

All three French visitors were at the cocktail party yesterday given by the National Friendship Train Committee and the Association of American Railroads at the Carlton Hotel.

It was a great day for the proud French people yesterday when the merci train, an expression of gratitude from all classes of Frenchmen, was put on view.

M. Picard with a string of five miniature war medals across his chest, was happy. But he was serious, too, when I talked to him through the willing interpreter services of Mrs. Edgar Ansel Mowrer and the Countess de Fels. "Tell her it comes from the 'little people,'" too, such as the blind man who gave his seeing-eye dog, and the surgeons who gave their instruments."

"Tell her, too," he said, "that the trains I chose were the same cars which had carried off our people as prisoners to Germany, and had taken the Jews to the crematory."

With 400 committees working throughout night and day to collect pack and transport the gifts, the Countess de Fels was one of the hardest working of women during the two months time that the project consumed. She'll stay with the train through Virginia, Georgia and Florida, and then hopes to be in New York for the exhibition of French culture to open at 57th st. and Madison ave., showing three centuries of progress in her country.

The countess who writes a column on art in the Revue de Paris which her family publishes, has just finished a book on French painting which will have an American publisher as well as French.

Prisoner of War

An underground worker during the war, Mme. Geoffroy told me she was arrested in Paris, kept a prisoner there by the Nazis until liberated by the Allies. She holds the Croix de Guerre and the Medaille de Liberation, awarded her by General de Gaulle and until her cabinet appointment was a member of the Paris municipality.

Flashbulbs popped all over the Carlton room yesterday catching among others, J. Carter Fort, vice president of the Association of American Railroads, who welcomed the guests, and the French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, and Mme. Bonnet, whose slim black frock was topped with a tiny side swept hat with cascading white osprey.

The Attorney General, Tom Clark, was there with Mrs. Clark in a wine red suit with matching hat trimmed with a fluff of pale pink ostrich.

Leslie Biffle and Mrs. Biffle chatted with former Representative and Mrs. Charles Dewey, and Representative and Mrs. Charles Halleck came with Mr. and Mrs. Francis Thomas.

Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Arnold whom I met on their way coming in, had an attractive looking young couple with them, and also there were Stephen T. Early, and Mrs. Drew Pearson who was joined later by her husband, originator of the Friendship Train, which in turn was responsible for the Merci Train.

Mrs. Russell Nicklin, who's French born, was particularly happy because she had learned that her brother, Leon Feyret had been photographed wearing his Verdun Medal from World War I, bidding the thank-you train god-speed as it left the French dock.

Mrs. Charles Brannan—I didn't see her husband, the Secretary of Agriculture—was there in a smart bronze lame gown, and still others were Mr. and Mrs. James Souby, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Col. Charles Lauzin, Air Attache of the French Embassy, who returned only the day before from France, with tiny blonde Mme. Lauzin: and the Counselor of the French Embassy and Mme. de Margerie.

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, "grand old lady" of the Grand Old Party, celebrated her birthday anniversary yesterday and was guest of honor at a cocktail party given by Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Gallagher in their apartment at Wardman Park.

Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred Vinson, Senator and Mrs. Owen Brewster and Senator and Mrs. Elmer Thomas came by to salute the guest of honor and others there were Justice Frank Murphy, Capt. and Mrs. J. J. Hughes, Capt. and Mrs. Edward A. Mitchell and Senator Joseph O'Mahoney without Mrs. O'Mahoney, who is ill.

Mrs. Parker West who celebrated a birthday last Sunday at the surprise birthday party which Mrs. Robert E. Freer gave her husband, was wearing the gardenias which Mrs. Freer had sent to her on that day.

Mrs. William W. Wirgman and her daughter, Mrs. Wayne Kittelle, were there and Louise Pullet was receiving congratulations on the portrait which she has just finished of the hostess and which was hanging on the wall.

Mr. and Mrs. William Jeffries Chewning were in the gathering and also Mr. and Mrs. James McSherry Wimsatt, Mrs. George Holmes, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Jack Meikle alone as Mrs. Meikle is hospitalized; Mrs. Hollister Sturges, Hugh Hutchinson and his mother, Mrs. Hugh Hutchinson; Count de Mace, Count de Larme with his sister-in-law, Countess de Larme.

Pen Women Hear Ray Henle

"Effective presentation of news on television still is something to shoot for," according to NBC news commentator Ray Henle.

Speaking at a tea given by the District of Columbia Branch of the National League of Pen Women yesterday afternoon, Henle said "None of the straight news programs now on television have come up with the answer to the need for a well balanced presentation of pictures and voice. People will not look indefinitely at a man who for 15 minutes merely reads a radio script, nor will crude still pictures and unrelated news shots fill the bill."

Henle, who is editor of the 3-Star-Extra nightly radio news program continued, "TV will have to provide the means of making the news live. If we don't find a way it well may be that the public will continue to rely on their standard radios to be informed as to what's going on in the world and what the news means."

About Sewing Classes for Adults

The class in sewing taught at George Washington High School in Alexandria during the fall semester will take up the subject of interior decoration during the second semester, with little actual sewing included in this phase of the course. In the Arlington County Schools, an adult sewing class is not planned for this semester, but the superintendent in charge of adult education tells me that if they have a sufficient number of persons interested in a beginning sewing class they will start one. I suggest you call the superintendent's office (OX 1114) on Monday, Wednesday or Thursday nights between 7 and 10 p. m. to get further details and find out about the registration.

I received a new skillet and would like to know if it is necessary to season it. It is made of stainless steel and has the copper bottom. If so, how is it done? D. O. B.

The manufacturers say that it is not necessary to season this type of frying pan.

Attention J. R.: Both G. S. M. and R. W. F have sent in suggestions on where to get Navy and Air Force pennants. The first, G. S. M. believes, can be purchased through the Book Shop at the United States Naval Academy or some other shop at Annapolis. R. W. F. suggests writing the Annapolis Mayor's office for the name of a shop selling them. G. S. M. says you should be able to get the Air Force pennants from shops near Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala.; Randolph Field, San Antonio, Tex., or any town near an Air Corps camp. Perhaps the Chambers of Commerce in these towns could give you the name of shops selling them.

Does anyone happen to have the recipe for "Mock Indian Pudding," made with graham crackers, not corn meal or bread? I got the original from the "Modern Priscilla Cookbook" but the page has been torn. E. C. T.

Perhaps you could find this cookbook at a large public library and check th erecipe. Or perhaps some reader will be kind enough to send it in.

I would like to know if there is any way of washing off paste left on the wallpaper by a careless paper hanger? P. R.

If you can get the paste wet all through it should come off readily. Dab a cloth which has been moistened with clear warm water over the paste, let stand for 10 minutes to absorb, and then try wiping it off. If it doesn't come off without rubbing, continue dampening until it will wipe off easily.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Trained Social Worker, Roused by Recent Column, Offers Valuable Suggestions for Teaching Children to Play Cooperatively

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your column of January 20 discussed a conflict between two neighboring mothers and their respective small daughters, age 3. The complainant's daughter, an "only" child so far, refuses to share her "nice" toys with her little playmate, and the latter bites her in vexation. The biter's mother laughs; the other mother fumes.

I should like to refer both mothers to the following book, a handy source of help in child training, namely, "Infant and Child in the Culture of Today," by Dr. Arnold Gesell and Frances L. Ilg. The chapter on "The Three Year Old" should interest them especially.

In the early part of the book, Gesell and Ilg explain that very young children are NOT sociable, and in nurseries the child up to three does best in "parallel play,"—that is, playing side by side with other children, but each absorbed in his own game.

Ownership Feeling Aids Child's Growth

PRELIMINARY to teaching children to share, they should be allowed to develop a feeling of ownership. When Billy understands "This is mine," he is more willing to recognize, "That is yours." Thus it is unwise to try to force a child to share before his property-sense has been developed.

Better to say, when a toy is fought for, "I am sorry, but that is Nick's and he doesn't want you to have it now." Billy is taught the same. Then it is tactfully suggested at times, "Maybe Nick can play with Billy's blocks while Billy rides Nick's hobby horse." Voluntary sharing will then develop naturally at the proper age level.

However, the pace of development varies in young children, their memories are short, and repeated experience is very necessary to build behavior patterns. Also authorities say 3-year-olds shouldn't play unsupervised for more than 20 minutes or fighting is apt to break out.

Biting is natural in young children, as you say, and Gesell and Ilg recommend temporary removal from the group (or victim) as a cure. Yet the child who was bitten should be told, "If you would play more nicely, Nick wouldn't want to bite you." And when a child of 3 isn't ready to share, some play with an older child, who is more tolerant yet sets a standard of sharing, may prove helpful.

Are the Mothers Doing Their Duty?

I WONDER whether the mothers in question supervise their children's play, anticipate and prevent fights, see that the visiting child brings some of her toys to the other child's house, to pave the way for friendly trades during play; and whether the mothers provide assorted toys suited to the children's age. It is my impression that they aren't doing these things.

I am a trained social worker, I find your column very instructive and enjoyable, and yet I have a problem, too! My main difficulty is finding books for less-educated parents, to do for them what Gesell's books do for college-trained readers. So, would you be willing to devote one column to a bibliography of books on: 1. Sex training for all ages. 2. Self Understanding. 3. Marriage. 4. Parent Training and Child Guidance. 5. Teen-age Problems.

In so doing, would you indicate which books are suitable for less and which for more educated persons? It would be a great help to all, and especially to those who are being constantly asked for advice by others. Thanks and good luck to your excellent work.

Pointers Supplement General Perspective

DEAR E. M.: In treating any subject, it is helpful to give both general perspective and specific pointers; but due to limited space, I am sometimes obliged to stress the one and omit the other. Thus, in the instance of January 20, my necessarily condensed discussion was aimed at relaxing the complaining mother's ill-founded grudge against her neighbor's child; and now I'm glad you've followed through with other concrete suggestions.

Sorry to say, I cannot oblige your request for a list of books that might satisfy all questions from all comers. I have no such list at my fingertips; and I recommend only those books I've read—with grateful respect for the author's helpfulness to me. Incidentally, it is my belief (different from yours) that any book worthy of study will give light to any earnest seeker, so long as he can read and the book is written in his native language. After all, look at Ben Franklin and Abe Lincoln, self-taught with the aid of good books: immortal proof that college training isn't the only route to profound learning.

The Demand For Food Will Lessen

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

At four months the child is at an interesting age. Up to this moment he has been something to look at and enjoy, now he responds with frantic motions of arms and legs when anyone he loves comes near to him.

When a toy is held out he is able to reach for it, probably with both hands instead of one hand. Toys take on a new significance since the baby is awake more than he has been formerly. He wakens and starts talking and cooing to himself, instead of waking with a demanding cry for food. This may go on for some time before he remembers that he is hungry.

Naps Often

It may well be that even after he has finished eating he will not be ready to settle down to another nap. In fact the sleeping periods are more well-defined now, one in the early morning, probably from eight to nine; another long nap right after the morning bath, then a shorter nap between three and four in the afternoon. The first and last naps may be from three-fourths to an hour in length, the after-bath nap from two to three hours in length. Most well babies of this age have no difficulty sleeping from six to six or a like twelve-hour period without any food.

Mrs. F. J. L. says her sixteen-week-old baby has her puzzled because he used to enjoy his bath and now he cries when he is put in the tub. Also, she writes, "He does not sleep all night and I wonder if this means he is not getting enough to eat?"

Towel Helps

It might help to put a large towel over the edge of the tub and lower him into it slowly on this. Use only a small amount of water in the tub until he gets over this temporary dislike of it.

If he is breast-fed (you didn't explain), this last feeding of the day may be less satisfying than the previous nursings. It may be that the formula needs changing and strengthening now. In addition to either of the above he needs cereal once or twice daily, sieved vegetables, sieved fruits, strained meat, orange juice and vitamin D. You'll know by this brief outline how far your baby's diet deviates from this well-rounded one.

Workouts in Woolies Keep Dancers' Gams Glamorous

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE is no side-stepping the hereditary fact that "legs" run in families. But all flaws can't be pinned on the limbs of the family tree—environment counts too. Muscle tone or the lack of it can make legs shapely or not so shapely.

For beautiful examples of what muscle tone can do for legs, take the ballerinas—Markova, Danilova, Zorina and Mia Slavenska. Three of these dancers started out with legs that were either spindly or heavy, and enthusiastically recommend exercise patterned on ballet as a means of improving legs. It's a sure cure if routines include exercises which stretch the calf and thigh muscles to counteract contraction and prevent the development of bulging muscles.

Another tip the ballet dancers pass along is to work out in wool tights to keep the leg muscles warm during exercise. This makes the muscles supple and keeps the legs slender. The professional skaters I've interviewed do all their workouts in wool tights.

So many of the gals with glamour gams have stressed this same beautifier—working out in woolies—that any girl with too large legs or knotty calf muscles might give it a trial, and do all exercise in wool stockings.

In the movies, it's interesting to find that most of the girls with outstandingly beautiful legs are dancers, or have been dancers—Betty Grable, Ginger Rogers, Ann Miller . . . and Jane Wyman and Evelyn Keyes.

Of course if you're a stenographer you can't make dancing a career! But turn on the music and dance. One girl I know makes a practice of slipping off her pumps and dancing about the room for 10 to 15 minutes each evening . . . and claims it's fun. Try it: up on the toes, down on the heels, like an Indian war dance. For too plump legs, put most of the emphasis on heel pointing exercises which stretch the calf muscles. Gals with skinny legs might try rope skipping.

What about knock-knees and bow-legs? Every now and then a girl will write that some leg defect is ruining her life, and implores help. After a girl is grown up, bony structure cannot be altered. But a few of the movie stars have bow-legs and they haven't let it ruin their lives! Life is too short to spend even one hour fretting over a defect that cannot be corrected. Any girl who makes the most of her good points, and develops a winning personality, can go far . . . lovely legs or no.

Church Services Begin Scout Week

Washington churches held special services devoted to Scouting yesterday as 12,000 Greater Washington Boy Scouts began observance of "Boy Scout Week."

In ceremonies at St. Matthew's Cathedral, Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle presented 15 Catholic Scouts with Ad Altare Dei medals for achievement in the spiritual phase of scouting.

Archbishop O'Boyle also presented M. Bruce King, commissioner of Scouts in Southwest and Southeast Washington, with the Archbishop Curley Medal for distinguished leadership.

Special mention of scouting was made in many other Catholic and Protestant churches, in many Scouts being asked to sit in special sections of the church auditoriums.

Meanwhile, at the Hyattsville Armory, Southern Maryland Boy Scouts closed their Scout-o-rama yesterday after 4000 visitors had inspected the exhibits over the weekend.

The fingerprint booth set up by Troop 226 of Green Meadows won first prize in a contest in which the exhibits were judged for completion, ingenuity, initiative, demonstration and arrangement.

Second place in the same contest went to Troop 203 of Mount Rainier for its cooking booth and Troop 228 of College Park won third place with its airplane structure demonstration. In all, 16 troops, four cub packs, two explorer units (senior scouts) and one sea scout troop were represented.

Staunton Off Soviet Fliers' Itinerary

Lexington, Va., Feb. 6 (AP).—The Staunton-Augusta Chamber of Commerce yesterday withdrew its invitation to the Virginia touring Russian fliers for a luncheon and sightseeing visit there Tuesday.

William Lashley of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, who is conducting the Russians on their one week circuit of Virginia, said he received a telegram from William T. McChesney, executive secretary of the Staunton-Augusta Chamber saying it would be unable to sponsor the luncheon.

The two Russians, Tovarich Anatol Barov and Peter Pirogov, came to this country after they deserted the Soviet air force, landing in the American occupied zone of Germany.

The two expressed a desire to tour Virginia after hearing the Old Dominion described on a Voice of America broadcast. The tour is being sponsored by the Virginia Chamber of Commerce.

Today, several hundred young misses at Sweet Briar College, near Lynchburg, played hostesses to the two fugitive Russians, as they traveled in an automobile toward Virginia Beach.

Use of State Funds Protested by Amvets

Richmond, Va., Feb. 6 (AP).—The executive committee of the Virginia Department, American Veterans of World War II (AMVETS), tonight telegraphed Governor Tuck its objection to use of State funds and property for the entertainment of the "two so-called Russian visitors."

The AMVETS have nine posts and about 500 members in the State.

Dan O'Flaherty, vice commander for northern Virginia, put it this way:

"It makes no difference to us which country these two came from. They are still deserters, and unauthorized aliens.

"If the Governor wants to entertain them as a personal matter, that is his business. But as it is, the taxpayer is paying the freight."

The State Chamber of Commerce is conducting the two Russian flyers—Lieuts. Peter Pirogov and Anatol Barsov—on a tour of Virginia. The only evidence of State participation in the tour was a Conservation Commission car used by a chamber official.

Reds in China Held Menace To Christians

Communist advances in China are a challenge to Christianity to redouble its missionary efforts, the Rev. John Arch Abernathy said yesterday at Congress Heights Baptist Church, Esther and Brothers pls. se.

Mr. Abernathy, a Southern Baptist missionary, spoke at one of a series of services marking opening of "World Missions Week" in 21 Greater Washington Baptist churches.

Missionaries are determined to stay in China no matter what happens there, he said, adding that the southern and western sections of the country offer "unlimited possibilities" for missionary work.

Interned by Japanese

Mr. Abernathy, as a missionary, has done educational evangelistic work in China since 1920. While principal of the Boys Middle School at Taian, Shantung, in 1941 he was interned by the Japanese, and was released after VJ-Day.

At Takoma Park Baptist Church, Piney Branch rd. and Aspen st. nw., Dr. James T. Williams described the Christian Church as being responsible for emancipation of Chinese women.

No Education for Women

Dr. Williams, formerly treasurer of Southern Baptist Missions in China, said until missionaries were sent to China there was little education for boys and none for women.

Christianity has set the pace, created the sentiment, and given the example in the development of democracy in China, he said.

Home and foreign missions workers will speak at mission week services in the 21 churches each night this week. Missionary luncheons are scheduled today through Friday at 12:30 p. m. at Metropolitan Baptist Church, Sixth and A sts. ne., followed by meetings at 1:15 p. m.

Big Audience Thrilled by Rubinstein

By Richard Keith

Constitution Hall was jammed to overflowing yesterday by an audience of music lovers who went to be thrilled by the dramatics of one of the most fabulous pianists of our generation, Artur Rubinstein. President and Mrs. Truman were there to join in the general enthusiasm.

Rubinstein is essentially a showman and relies largely upon the sensational, whether it be grandiose or miniature, lyrical or dramatic. He probably can play softer, louder, faster, and more elastically than any other pianist alive, and herein lie both his greatness and weakness. Having at his command such a rich palette of tonal hues, he can miraculously transform a dull piece of music into an interesting one and yet, on the other hand, it is hard for him to restrain himself from meddling too much with a piece which had better be played simply and straightforwardly.

The program opened with the Busoni transcription of the Organ Toccata, Adagio, and Fugue in C Major. The combined efforts of Busoni and Rubinstein led poor Bach a merry chase in the Toccata, but the Adagio and Fugue were quite effective.

The major work of the program was Brahms' early Sonata in F Minor, to which the performer brought an astonishing amount of life and interest. In the second and fourth movements, Rubinstein employed to the full his uncannily soft and aeolian-harp-like tone colors. The final movement gave ample opportunity for bombast and bravura.

Rubinstein is at his best with the music of Chopin, which not only shows off the artist's breathtaking technique, but also lends itself better than most music to emotional excesses. The four Mazurkas by Szymanowski, which opened the second half of the program, are basically in the Chopin spirit, notwithstanding their modern harmonies, and they were performed in just that way.

In the final Chopin group, a lot of tired warhorses got at least a temporary new lease on life. The A flat Ballade, three Preludes, the C sharp minor Valse, and the B flat minor Scherzo all received novel and stimulating, if somewhat exaggerated, readings.

The audience recalled Rubinstein for three encores, the last being the De Falla Ritual Fire Dance, which will soon be to Rubinstein what the C sharp minor Prelude was to Rachmaninoff.

One on the Aisle—

Living Theater Ably Surveyed

By Richard L. Coe

GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY'S alert drama man, Edward Mangum, has written an able survey of the living theater in a leaflet, "Confidential From Washington," which goes out to 20,000 G. W. alumni.

Mangum is largely concerned with university theaters and their potential strength in what, for want of a better term, is called "the noncommercial theater." As the chap who's been so active in putting theater on an official footing at G. W., Mangum understands what he's writing about and his six points on university theater echo what he's been trying to do these past two years on H street.

Most interesting of his points is the idea of establishing a small, but permanent producing company on a salary basis, composed of qualified students who would work in plays for paying audiences. To these would be added guest players and directors to lend lustre and experience to the group.

From time to time, as you know, this has been practiced with signal success by Catholic University's speech and drama department. I shall always remember, for instance, a production some years ago by Father Hartke's group of "The Far Off Hills," with Sara Allgood.

Next season, it seems to me, would be a splendid opportunity for the university to back Mangum's third point—guest players. For that will be the 150th anniversary of our Capital and what could be more appropriate for the university George Washington founded than to present a series of American plays with the finest available leading actors?

Whether there will be any competition from the Un-National National by then has no bearing on the matter. Scores of leading players are, as we say, "at liberty" too much of the time anyway and they're always proud to play Washington. For the festive Sesquicentennial year, what could be more apt than a series of American plays at the old Columbian College?

The university might, for instance, do Maxwell Anderson's drama about George Washington, "Valley Forge." Chronologically, it might start with another Anderson, set to Kurt Weill's lovely score, "Knickerbocker Holiday," which is to be done this spring by the Mount Vernon Players in their small boite. And "Uncle Tom's Cabin"—that's not been seen since a Players Club revival many seasons back. To stick to that period, perhaps Miss Hayes could be persuaded to revive "Harriet," that war-time hit of hers about the author of Uncle Tom. And for Yankee nostalgia, what about O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness!"?

Plays of the recent past could include "A Sound of Hunting," which Washington has never seen. Either Raymond Massey or Richard Gaines, who succeeded him in the part, might do Sherwood's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and why not revive Drinkwater's memorable Lincoln?

Well, it's just an idea, Dr. Marvin. Mr. Mangum and your associate Colonials, but it's what happens to a man who reads the Mangum Report and gets to thinking of the Capital's coming festival year.

MARGARET WEBSTER'S Shakespearean company tour of colleges and scattered communities, since we're talking of noncommercial theater, has been sensationally successful . . . Touring factor . . . Friday's benefit will be a posh opening for "Symphonie Pastorale," the highly-praised French film starring Michele Morgan and Pierre Blanchar from a short novel by Andre Gide . . . Mrs. Philip L. Graham is chairman of Friday's ticket committee.

MANNIX WALKER, the Hillyer Place author whose "The Lonely Carrot" has people chuckling, by bus, the company had a rocky beginning of a projected 16-week season, but things snowballed into a 27-week tour and the group may stick together for a straw-hat tour . . . It may well gross $225,000 for this season, playing "Hamlet" and "Macbeth" . . . There's talk for next year adding "Othello" and either "Twelfth Night" or "The Taming of the Shrew."

THE NATIONAL SYMPHONY benefit Friday night at the Playhouse is drawing out the Capital's true residents, those faithful folk who've participated through the years in seeing to it that the orchestra Hans Kindler founded in 1931 doesn't go the way all similar attempts have done before it . . . Administrations and Congresses come and go, but residential support is always the biggest shares a directoral spotlight tonight with Elizabeth Mitchell . . . Walker's one-act play, "Murder, One\Lump and Cream," and Miss Mitchell's "The Strange Love of Clara Dunlilly" will be acted at the Southeast Dramatics Association's meeting at Friendship House, 619 D st. se., at 8:30. . . . Both these new one-act plays will be directed by their authors, with Anita Acosta, William Fitzgerald, Constance McCornick, William McCornick and Joland Oberly in Walker's cast, and with Alfred McClain, Wanda Nicholson and Thomas Wingrove in Miss Mitchell's.

ALEXANDRIA'S LITTLE Theater also is giving two one-act plays tonight in its Workshop at the Recreation Center on Cameron st. . . . The plays are Saroyan's "Hello Out There" and Coward's "Family Album."

THE DISTRICT LINE — by Bill Gold

It's a Dangerous Place For Autos to Walk

Mrs. E. B. Drown of 3315 Legation st. nw. wonders whether the reporter who covered a recent accident for us really got all his facts straight. In part, his account read:

". . . who was injured by an auto walking in the street at New York ave. and M st. nw."

MISCELLANY

In a recent item I suggested that we might beat the parking problem by using helicopters (and parachutes) to get to work; but I couldn't figure out how we'd get back to the machines, which we'd park in the sky . . . Audrey Ruddock of 1226 Massachusetts ave. nw. suggests that I could leave a stout rope dangling from the helicopter, and shinny up—obviously an impractical idea for me, for heights of more than eight feet . . . June Elinor Mesirow of 3544 Appleton st.

has a different suggestion: Hire a pilot to run the helicopter back to where it came from, while I take a streetcar home . . . Equally practical ideas would be to build a stairway to the stars, walk home, trust my car to a woman driver, or get on a quiz program and strike it so rich I could retire . . . I interviewed an income tax expert on my WTOP program recently, and John H. Young of 6900 Bradley blvd., Bethesda, Md., tells me I forgot to ask one pertinent question: "When he finished urging us to file our returns early, you should have inquired as to whether he'd filed his own return yet" . . . That wouldn't do, John—we must never embarrass our guests . . . In our morning contemporary's "Miscellaneous For Sale" columns, H. W. Ross, of 616 Longfellow st. nw. finds a strange piece of merchandise: "Catholic Univ. Vic.—lge. bright front rm." . . . Portable, eh? . . . I can't resist stopping to watch traffic cops who make a full scale "production" of directing rush hour traffic. Their whistles play a melody all their own . . . A. G. Mullet of 5511 30th st. nw. says I shouldn't criticize Capital Transit's streetcars for running in bunches, because this is caused by the first car in the string being delayed by traffic—and that piles up the other cars, which follow. That's a fine explanation, except that streetcars in other cities also operate in heavy traffic, yet somehow don't gather in a series of "trains"—with long gaps in between . . . The Inaugural cleanup "heat" has cooled considerably, and gambling operations are returning to a more normal basis.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

In the past, you have been a staunch champion of the people. Why aren't you fighting against the idea of radio commercials on streetcars. I don't get it.

Virginia Sobotka
1669 Columbia rd. nw.

Dear Virginia:

A fair question. Here are a few reasons why I've held my fire:

1. I've found that it's well to know what I'm talking about before I start shooting off my face. The company promises that the commercials will be short, infrequent, and in good taste. They say 90 per cent of the passengers favor the idea, once they become accustomed to it. They say it'll make the ride "go faster." Okay, I'll wait and see whether these things are true.

2. Maybe people will learn to demand better radio programming generally, if transit radio sets a good example.

3. Any revenue the transit company can extract from sponsors will be that much less you and I will have to shell out.

Bill.

SIGN OF THE TIMES

Donald E. Ney suspects that the Government is going too far in its drive to tighten up credit restrictions. Don says there's a sign in a local furniture store which offers:

"Pillows—100% down."

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—The Duke of Windsor ordered some silk shirts, with monograms, and then learned that the monogramming would be expensive because of the crowns. "I think," he told the Duchess, "I'll just have them initialed—and tell them to take the crown off." "You know, my dear," replied the Duchess, "this won't be the first time."

At the March of Dimes fashion show in the Waldorf, the newspaperwoman, Inez Robb, sat at a table with some haughty dowagers who paid no heed to her in their conversation. Their eyes sparkled when they saw Rex Harrison arrive . . . Miss Robb, who had interviewed the actor a week earlier, left the table to speak to him, was greeted by him warmly, and then returned to the table and glanced at her watch. She turned sweetly to the dowagers and made them gulp enviously by saying: "My husband's always late."

Bill Veeck of the Cleveland Indians was guest of honor at a party given by Elsa Maxwell Saturday night, at Le Pavillon. The men wore black-tie, but, as is his preference, Veeck wore no tie at all . . . "I once owned a tie, 15 years ago," said Veeck, "but I didn't like it. When I joined the Marines, they knew I didn't wear ties, but they suggested a tie would go nicely with my uniform. I saw their point—quickly."

Carleton Smith tells of his visit to Hyde Park to interest Mr. Roosevelt in a National Arts Foundation. The President told him that most big tax-payers felt that they were paying their taxes to "that Roosevelt" instead of to the Government. "I knew they'd rather give it to an art project than to 'that Roosevelt,'" he said "And so the Government is helping art, by making contributions to its support deductible on tax returns."

Somerset Maugham made a brief speech at Overseas Press Club this week. He told how he learned to make speeches brief: "Charles Norris once introduced me at the Bohemian Club in San Francisco, and warned that the members were businessmen who had to rush back to their office. 'I've got so much to say about you introducing you,' said Norris, 'that there'll little time left—and you'll have to be brief."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Merci Train Proves Parable

By Drew Pearson

When the Gratitude Train was in Paris loading its cargo for the United States, a woman, obviously poor, came down to the Gare d'Orsay with a package.

Lewis

"This is a very small present," she said, "and I should not do this. The Communists would not like it.

"You see," she explained further, "I am a Communist. But last winter when my children were so hungry the Americans helped them. They gave milk and flour and didn't ask what political party we belonged to. Now I want the Americans to know we appreciate their help."

That incident illustrates, more eloquently than editorials or speeches, the fact that bread cast upon the waters comes back in hundredfold dividends, plus the further fact that so many Congressmen failed to realize regarding UNRRA and other American relief—namely, that it does not pay to play politics with empty stomachs.

Merry-Go-Round

John L. Lewis' bargaining position in the coal industry is being hurt by the "unusual" winter weather. Because most of the East is having a mild winter, coal stocks are now up about 58 per cent over last year, giving the Nation more than a 60-day stockpile. This means Lewis won't be able to tie up the country easily when his contract negotiations open this spring . . . "Muley Bob" Doughton of North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, is blazing mad about the "packing" of his committee with six new Democratic liberals—so mad, in fact, that he has indicated to friends he will give the President's four-billion-dollar tax request an extended deep freeze in his committee . . . President Truman has told visitors he will move very slowly in reshuffling the Cabinet. No further changes expected before the budget is passed by Congress . . . American Ambassador to Moscow Bedell Smith has his eyes on becoming Commander of the First Army at Governors Island, New York.

End of Committee

After 30 days stay of grace, the Senate Small Business Committee has quietly passed on to where the good committees often go. It ceased to exist. Its authority to operate simply ran out.

However, it did not go on to the limbo of forgotten things. For, a few hours later, Democratic Senators held a post-mortem behind closed doors. Senator Jim Murray of Montana, who has always fought for small business though his own millionaire holdings amount to big business, appealed to his colleagues to revive the committee. He was joined by Senators Claude Pepper of Florida and Brien McMahon of Connecticut.

But for every Senator who championed the Small Business Committee, two stood up against it. They pointed out that fair-minded Senator Burnet Maybank of South Carolina had appointed a fine subcommittee of his Banking and Currency Committee to handle small business—which is true. However, Murray contended that a subcommittee cannot operate with the same independence and forthrightness as a special, independent committee.

Also, the Republicans, under rambunctious Senator Wherry of Nebraska, did a good job of running the Small Business Committee, and Murray, calling attention to this past record, pleaded: "Letting the committee die might be used against us politically."

"How much good did it do the Republicans?" came a voice from the rear of the room.

No Power to Pass Laws

"The trouble with the Special Small Business Committee," argued South Carolina's Maybank, "was that after it got through with all its hearings, it was still helpless. It had no authority to legislate."

"If you really want a special committee on small business," snapped Senator Spessard Holland, of Florida, "make it a standing committee so you will have power to make legislation."

Holland argued that the special committee not only couldn't legislate, but that other committees paid little attention to it. He cited the Small Business Committee's report on steel which he had referred to on the Senate floor and found that the other Senators knew nothing about it.

Virginia's A. Willis Robertson, Louisiana's Allen Ellender and Arkansas' Bill Fulbright also argued against a special committee.

Finally, Majority Leader Lucas of Illinois wound up the discussion by suggesting that if anybody wanted to revive the Small Business Committee, the thing to do was to draw up a resolution. Montana's Murray started work on this immediately.

Dawson Wins Respect

Illinois' Congressman William Dawson, first Negro committee chairman in congressional history, is proving that he can make democracy work in the House Expenditures Committee.

One man who is keenly aware of this is Harry Truman. The day before Dawson's committee reported the reorganization measure for House action, the President told the Chicago Negro:

"I couldn't have asked for better cooperation from your committee on this important legislation. You're doing a great job. Keep it up."

Turning to the committee colleagues who accompanied him, Dawson said: "Thank you, Mr. President, but these gentlemen and others on the committee deserve the credit, not me."

Three outstanding legislators from the South made it a special point to go to the White House with Dawson and support him—Henderson Lanham of Georgia, Porter Hardy, jr., of Virginia, and Herbert Bonner of North Carolina. Others who accompanied Dawson were Chet Holifield of California, Frank Karsten of Missouri, and House Majority Leader John McCormack of Massachusetts.

Men like Lanham, Hardy and Bonner have worked with Dawson because they like him personally, respect his ability, and because they have a high regard for the democratic process of government.

It's a Matter Of Policy . . .

SAYS HARRY E. CARTER, EMPLOYMENT DIRECTOR OF THE HECHT CO.

"It's a matter of policy at The Hecht Co.," says Mr. Carter . . . "because it's our policy to do our best to make every member of our store family feel at home . . . and it's a big family we have . . . 3,500 people . . . that represents a fair segment of our community. There are no laws in the statute books demanding that The Hecht Co. provide for its personnel to the extent that it does. But an enlightened management knows that it is just good business to offer its associates adequate insurance at nominal cost. Not only life insurance but insurance against illness, insurance to help cover the expense of an operation . . . hospital fees . . . examinations . . . insurance that provides every associate with the peace of mind so necessary to serve you, the public, efficiently. It's axiomatic that people do a better job serving the public with the freedom of mind that results from our planned social security. My entire time," says Mr. Carter, "is devoted to the benefit of the 3,500 people who make up The Hecht Co. My job is to see that every Hecht Co. associate is invited, not obligated, to participate in all of the insurance and benefit programs. Many of these plans are conducted by a board of store members who are chosen by individual democratic ballots. These plans are not recent innovations, but the outgrowth of 53 years of study and effort on the part of the management to make The Hecht Co. a better place to work . . . a better place to shop."

Harry E. Carter, better known as "Nick," was born in Washington, D. C. He has been with The Hecht Co. fourteen years, and boasts of having worked in almost every service department within the store. He is a graduate of Maryland University with a degree in Business Administration. Nick spent six years in the Armed Services . . . his last year as a Lt. Colonel in the Military Government of Korea. As Employment Director at The Hecht Co., he is responsible for maintaining the basic selling and service forces throughout the store. In addition he handles The Hecht Co. Employees' Mutual Benefit Association, the pension and annuity programs for The Hecht Co. Associates.
